SINGERS TO GIVE CHICAGO JUBILEE ARTISTIC NOTE

2,000 to Be Heard in Choruses in Loop.

As Jubilee Nears

The French Golden Gloves champion arrive in Chicago to meet America's Golden Gloves winners in Soldiers' Field on Tuesday night in the first international Golden Gloves tournament, sponsored by The Chicago Tribune. The tournament will be a major event of the Chicago Jubilee. Details in sports section.

Final plans for the grand parade which will formally inaugurate the Jubilee on Monday night are announced, together with further details of the revelry that will mark the State street carnival of Wednesday night. Page 12.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Chicago's Jubilee will be more than hats and hoopla.

It will have its genuinely artistic values.

Foremost among those values will be the programs of choral singing to be given on Friday evening, May 15, at three corners in the loop.

From the tops of fifty buses loaned by the Chicago Motor Coach company at least 2,000 singers representing more than a score of the leading choral societies of Chicago will be heard in their choicest numbers.

It will be a two hour concert, beginning at 8 o'clock and culminating at 11 with the massing of the singers in a finale drive for the rendition of patriotic anthems.

A Moving Songfest.

It will be a moving songfest, for after each group of choristers has sung for ten minutes at its designated station it will ride, still singing, to another corner just vacated by another group.

This arrangement will enable the audiences lining the sidewalks to hear the music without discomfort or crowding.

No such festivity has ever been attempted in the clamorous loop, whose name by day is a synonym for hurry and worry and worry; and it will be comparable to those spontaneous and charming fiestas which European cities give with complete lack of self-consciousness and enjoy with true artistic relish.

Recalling Poet's Words.

Mr. Longfellow's pretty jingle in "The Day Is Done" comes to mind, and it gives the spirit of an occasion unique in the annals of Chicago's seeming mile of concentrated turmoil:

And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away.

The loop has had many a month of worry and it counts on genuine relief in folding them up next Friday evening, though the surcease be for one night only.

Response to this feature of the Jubilee has been enthusiastic.

The rally of the Motor Coach company to the music lovers who have in mind the details of preparation was, and you can have anything in the way of transportation for the singers that you want."

More Choral Groups Enter.

Every day since Monday additional choral societies have been offering their services.

Further entries will be received by the Association of Commerce [Telephone Franklin 7700] until next Monday evening.

To assign time for convenient rendezvous the entrants will be informed of points where they are to meet. Upon their arrival on Friday evening at these points they will find the buses assigned to them placarded with the names of their organizations.

The principal stations for the opening of the programs have already been designated.

They are:

Randolph and State streets.
Randolph and Clark streets.
Madison and State streets.
Madison and Clark streets.
Adams and State streets.

Other Places to Be Chosen.

Eight other points within the loop will be selected later and in addition there will be the area of final rendezvous for the mass singing in the Grant park drive plaza, where the buses

SPAIN DEMANDS VATICAN RECALL HEAD OF CHURCH

Vigorous Note Sent to Papal Nuncio.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, May 7.—The Spanish republic tonight asked for the scalp of the primate of Spain, Pedro Cardinal Segura, archbishop of Toledo.

Taking up the challenge of the cardinal's pastoral letter yesterday, in which the high churchman urged the Catholics of Spain to elect deputies "who will defend and guarantee the rights of the church" at the approaching parliamentary elections, Fernando de Los Rios, minister of justice, called on the papal nuncio this evening and presented a note for the Vatican asking that the great prelate be summoned to Rome.

Second Lusty Complaint.

And he must be recalled "urgently," De Los Rios told Msgr. Frederico Tedeschini in his second lusty complaint against the cardinal's attitude in two weeks.

Although many clergymen tonight denied that the cardinal's pastoral letter comes in the category of political interference, which the republic now refuses the church, the government and the Republican press think it obviously does.

Cardinal Segura is accused of carrying his feelings as far as a boycott of Republican grocers, butchers and even physicians in Toledo. As the city, which voted Republican in the fatal municipal election, lives off of scores of Catholic seminaries, such discrimination is regarded ruinous to a large percentage of the population.

Paper to Accuse Cardinal.

The Heraldo, ardent Republican sheet in Madrid, will bring this accusation against the cardinal tomorrow.

If the Vatican accedes to Los Rios' demand, Cardinal Segura will leave, it is believed, for Italy and a long vacation in Palestine, and it is understood that the appointment of a new cardinal more favorable to the republic will follow. Msgr. Tedeschini, formerly papal nuncio to Germany, is known to favor the creation of a Catholic Center party like the German Centrists.

The bishop of Bilbao has also fallen afoul of the republic's prohibition of political "meddling." The governor of Bilbao tomorrow will ask for his transfer to another province.

Feeling Against Criticism Strong.

"The cardinal's pastoral letter does not agree with the spirit or attitude of the Catholic church in other countries, where democratic régimes have replaced monarchial government and brought about a separation of church and state. The Vatican may have cause to regret any support it implies to this pronouncement."

Negotiations between Barcelona and Madrid on the status of the province of Catalonia came to an agreeable end today when Col. Francisco Macia's latest emissary to President Alcala Zamora promised to accept the new definition of mutual prerogatives until the constituent parliament has settled everything. Madrid is secretly counting, it appears, on the election of a new man to replace Col. Macia as Catalonia's provisional governor when the Catalan municipalities meet on May 24 to draft tentative statutes to be presented to parliament.

Salesman Shot by Bandit in Calumet City Street

Ralph Walker, 46 years old, 7148 Jeffery avenue, salesman for the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., defied a holdup man who leaped on the running board of his automobile at Ingram avenue and State street in Calumet City last night. The robber fired once and his bullet struck Walker in the chest. The wounded man was taken to St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond, where it was said he would recover. The gunman escaped.

Tries Holdup on Policeman In Auto and Is Captured

With a pistol in his hand James Moran, 22 years old, of Peoria jumped on the running board of an automobile at Woodlawn avenue and 55th street at 12:05 a. m. today. He told the occupant to "stick 'em up." Instead of doing so the prospective victim, who was South Park Policeman Emmett McCormick, 9016 Justine street, drew his own pistol. Moran's pistol clicked and a cartridge failed to explode. After a short chase on foot he was captured.

MICHELSON SINKS INTO COMA; END BELIEVED NEAR

Pasadena, Cal., May 7.—(AP)—Dr. Walter Bliss, attending physician, said tonight that Dr. Albert A. Michelson, 78 year old dean of American physicists, lapsed into unconsciousness at 5:30 p. m., as a result of a sudden turn for the worse in his condition.

Dr. Bliss said death apparently was near. Dr. Michelson has been ill for a month.

Dr. Michelson, former head of the physics department of the University of Chicago, was taken ill while conducting his final and most ambitious experiment—an attempt to eliminate the minute fractional error in his computation of the speed of light by flashing a beam ten miles between mirrors in a mile long vacuum tube.

His illness was diagnosed as paralysis. Dr. Bliss said he believed a cerebral hemorrhage caused the sudden sinking spell.

Dr. Michelson was the first American to be awarded the Nobel prize for scientific achievement.

Huldah Randall, 79, Third Cousin of Hoover, Is Dead

Dansville, N. Y., May 7.—(AP)—Miss Huldah Randall, 79, third cousin of President Herbert Hoover and a music teacher here for many years, died today. Miss Randall was born in New Market, Ontario, Canada. She was well acquainted with the President when he was a small boy in West Branch, Ia. Her father and the President's father were blacksmiths there.

Lost Explorer Found Alive on Ice Plateau

ANGMAGSALIK, Greenland, May 7.—(AP)—Augustine Courtauld, young British scientist, believed to have been lost on the wastes of Greenland's ice cap, was found alive today.

Capt. Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish flyer, missed discovering Courtauld, although he landed his plane beside the scientist's hut. The dog-sledge rescue party, under H. G. Watkins, director of the expedition Courtauld served, had arrived there first and "beaten" the flyer to the rescue.

Ahrenberg aided, however, by delivering food and supplies to the rescue party later.

Lands Close to Hut.

He took off from the expedition base at 9 a. m., setting his course as nearly as possible for the site of Courtauld's hut. After flying three hours he sighted it and landed close by.

Leaving his plane and walking toward the hut, he found it empty. It was near a tent surrounded by a rampart of snow. Leading away from it were the tracks of Watkins' sledge. Ahrenberg again took off in his plane, flying low, followed the sledge trail. He soon sighted the rescue party, with Watkins leading and Courtauld walking behind.

They all seemed in good spirits, he said. He dropped food from the plane and, flying back to the base from which he started, brought the good news.

Augustine Courtauld, with 14 other young scientists, left London July 6, 1930, on Sir Ernest Shackleton's flagship Quest to study the possibility of an arctic air route from England to Canada. The expedition was under the auspices of the Royal Geographical society, and was led by H. G. Watkins.

On Aug. 14 the party established a permanent camp at Sermelikfjord, 27 miles inland from Angmagsalik, Greenland. Later a small party scaled the Greenland ice cap and set up a meteorological station 140 miles inland. Courtauld volunteered to spend the winter there alone and was scheduled to be relieved in April. Watkins led a small expedition to his camp late in March, but was unable to find Courtauld on account of the changing terrain.

Russia Executes 22 High Officers on Revolt Charge

BERLIN, May 7.—(AP)—Dispatches from Kharkov tonight reported that the OGPU, soviet secret service organization, executed 22 high officers in the Ukrainian military district. The officers, the report said, were arrested a month ago and charged with attempting a military revolt.

FARMER KILLED BY DRY AGENTS; SAY HE RESISTED

Columbus, Miss., May 7.—(AP)—Wales Land, 27, farmer, was shot to death today by federal prohibition agents, who told Sheriff John Williams he resisted arrest.

The agents, Wiley Wright of Amory, D. J. Hendricks of Aberdeen, and Henry Furr of Clarksdale, advised the sheriff that Land was shot in a field near his home several miles from Columbus. They said they carried his body to the porch of his home and left it there. It was found by his sister when she returned from Columbus. Land's wife and young son arrived soon afterward.

Authorities said Land never had been arrested on liquor charges, but had been under surveillance during a cleanup in this section.

Suspended for Fire.

Seattle, Wash., May 7.—(AP)—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, national prohibition director, late today indefinitely suspended two Seattle prohibition agents who, in setting a still house afire, started a blaze that destroyed three homes and swept 250 acres.

Col. Woodcock, here on a tour of inspection, promised to seek compensation from congress for the families of Gottlieb Stock, William Niemann, and E. T. Bucknell. After hearing their complaint Woodcock said he was convinced the agents, Frederick M. Taylor and Basil V. Cunningham, did not intend to destroy more than the shack, but "displayed fearful judgment and were careless beyond all reason."

JOHN IMPROVES HIS TIME WHILE ON PROBATION

For some of his past misdeeds John Kuffel, 22 years old, 2654 North Marmora avenue, had been placed on probation by a lenient court. Probation in the lexicon of young Mr. Kuffel was a synonym for opportunity, and he wanted to keep it operative.

Punctually he reported yesterday, as required, at the probation office in the county building. An officer looked him over. Mr. Kuffel's suit was pressed and he said he had a job. So the officer wrote O. K. on his record and he walked out.

But near the county building door a policeman questioned him about parking his car in a forbidden zone. He was taken to the central station and there he admitted that the car was stolen from one man, the license from another and the neatly pressed suit from a third. Yesterday afternoon Judge Allegretti of the Boys' court sentenced Mr. Kuffel to serve a year in the Pontiac reformatory.

Firemen Burn Way Into Building to Stop Flames

Burning their way through four steel doors with acetylene torches, firemen early this morning dragged their hose lines into the two story brick building of the Progressive Sales Co., a salvage concern at 1103-09 Randolph street, in the market district, and put out a fire that had caused damage estimated at $25,000.

Yanks to Make Red Whoopee in 'Hot' Moscow

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, April 12.—[By mail.]—An American bar, with a real bartender in a white jacket, and imported liquor to make Martinis, Manhattans, Bacardis, and real French champagne and German beer, is what Moscow is going to have within a short time.

Work is proceeding in the Metropole hotel on a new bar and a de luxe restaurant for supper dances. A tango orchestra and a jazz band will supply the music. The restaurant will boast trickling fountains and a stage.

It's part of the campaign to make Moscow attractive to tourists and to give the "tired" American engineers, experts, and specialists a spice of night life and a chance to spend some of their rubles, as they are paid partly in Russian money and the balance in American dollars, deposited to their accounts in banks in the United States.

Only Foreigners Admitted.

Only foreigners will be admitted, and while guests will not be required to show passports, a more practical ruling will keep the natives out, because only foreign valuta will be accepted in payment, such as dollars pounds sterling, marks, francs, guilden, lira, pesetas, crowns, or what have you?

Old "Mammy," the veteran, mysterious American Negress, a conspicuous figure in Moscow since the days of the American Russian Relief association during the Volga famine a decade ago, when she was cook for its executives, will be in charge of the ladies' room of the new bar restaurant. The bartender has not yet been selected, but the hotel management has under consideration two amiable gents who mix mean cocktails from American experience.

All they need are the ingredients, they say. They will provide their own shakers.

The Boiled Shirt Problem.

Perhaps only evening dress will be permitted in the restaurant for the supper dance. The management is worried over the laundry question. One problem begets another. It is a great task to get a b'iled shirt cleansed unless one cleans it with benzine.

Some sinister Chinese laundries make a stab at doing dress shirts. They usually stab and rip them right across the back, or deep in a vulnerable place in the bosom. On top of that they ask 2 rubles, or $1 at the exchange rate, for the job, and take two weeks to do it.

Perhaps there will even be Muscovite gigolos to dance with stout, middle aged women who wish to cavort about with patent leather haired princes and barons, at so much a dance.

An American Menu.

Efforts will be made to provide a real American menu for tourists, as the wealthy class is envisaged as forming about 80 per cent of the hotel's clientele. There will be ham and eggs, Irish stew, and hamburger steak for luncheon.

Dinner will reveal chicken a la king, made just like Morgan produces it in the Chicago inn in Paris with green peppers and a garnish of pimento, porterhouse steaks, succulent mutton chops brown, roasted chickens, ducks, and pies and puddings.

The bar is the big feature and the American colony is looking forward to a meeting place where it can get together and swap rumors. The state will grant special import liquor licenses.

Any one ordering vodka will be thrown out. Any band playing tzigane music will be fired on the spot. The stiff necked communist officials will stifle their antipathy to modern American jazz and let the band get as hot as it wishes to provide suitable syncopated stuff for the hoofers.

The Americans will make red whoopee in Moscow this summer!

JURY WILL OPEN INQUIRY MONDAY ON $40,000 LOSS

Audit Finds I. O. U.'s in Treasury.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The juggling of taxpayers' cash in the city treasury during the last administration, with a resultant present shortage of $40,024, was disclosed officially yesterday in the report of an audit ordered by James A. Kearns, recently elected city treasurer.

JAMES A. KEARNS.

During the latter part of March the shortage was $109,315. Then friends of former City Treasurer Charles S. Peterson, all officials of the old régime, dug down in their pockets and restored to the treasury $40,000.

That left the deficiency at $69,351 when Mr. Kearns took office as city treasurer on April 10. Since that date $29,146 more, which had been taken from the city's treasury on I. O. U.'s, checks and other "security" has been returned.

Grand Jury to Call Officials.

The revelation of the officials' donation to the city treasury was first made before the special grand jury on March 31 by Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works under the old administration. Wolfe is reported to have told of a midnight meeting at the Congress hotel at which the officials discussed the shortage and pledged funds to cover part of it.

In interviews yesterday Louis E. Golan, former city hall henchman; Carter Blatchford, member of the school board, and Christian P. Paschen, former building commissioner, told of the midnight meeting and of the plans to raise $40,000 for the shortage fund.

As a result of the audit and the other revelations the special grand jury on Monday will start questioning former city officials, according to Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court and members of the jury. The first witnesses, it was indicated, will be City Treasurer Kearns and August B. Singer, who acted as city treasurer under the old régime after Peterson was promoted to the office of city controller.

Return of Funds Explained.

The report of the audit yesterday showed that of the additional $29,146 returned to its proper place, Singer has had his lawyer hand over $17,000.

The present shortage of $40,204 is tentatively looked upon as a loss. Corporation Counsel Busch has notified the security companies that the city expects "a probable loss," which is said to be a necessary preliminary to starting a suit for recovery if the surety companies fail to pay promptly.

The basis for the notice is the audit of the treasurer's books, covering three weeks, which Treasurer Kearns began when he came into office. The report of the auditors was sent by Kearns yesterday afternoon to Mayor Cermak and City Controller Szymczak.

Reveals $100,000 Tied Up.

On top of this shortage in the city treasury proper, the report states that former Treasurer Singer deposited $75,000 in "the closed Austin National bank on behalf of the Municipal Employés Annuity and Benefit fund."

Another $25,000 was put in this same bank from the funds of the Policemen's Annuity and Benefit fund, according to the report. Perhaps all or part of these deposits will be recovered eventually. It is the intention of the new city administration to take action against the bonds supplied by the bank to obtain the deposits in full within a reasonably short time.

Taking this latter $100,000 into account, a total of $140,000 in city funds is out of its proper place.

Cashier to Be Witness.

In the coming inquiry by the special grand jury on Monday, the most promising witness, so far as the actual withdrawal of the cash from the treasury is concerned, is Earl G. Bingham, cashier in the treasurer's office. Of the $40,204 present shortage from the treasury, $36,020 was withdrawn on the O. K. of Bingham.

His friends and fellow employés in the city hall express the opinion that Bingham did not personally get the money. They believe that he drew it out for others.

Reported on Leave.

Bingham is shown on the city pay rolls as having taken a leave of absence, but the civil service commission claims to have received no report on the official form for the leave. He left the treasurer's office when Mr. Kearns took office. He has been around the city hall several times since and was chatting with friends in the city controller's office on Wednesday.

Treasurer Kearns said last night that he has had no opportunity to talk with Bingham since learning of the situation. Friends of the cashier pointed out that his actions indicate clearly that he was not the beneficiary of the withdrawals of treasury cash, and would probably tell who got the money if pressed to make that disclosure.

All of the $36,020 withdrawn on the approval of Bingham, was taken out of the treasury during the term of Peterson. He was elected in 1927 when the former city hall régime went into power, although he was then a member of the county board. He retained that office, although relinquishing the chairmanship of the finance committee of the county board.

Makes Trips Abroad.

Peterson assumed a leadership in the plan for the 1933 World's Fair and was selected as its vice president. In the interest of the exposition he made trips to Europe and to Mexico.

When George K. Schmidt resigned the office of city controller Peterson was appointed to this office, and he was succeeded as treasurer by Singer. Singer's political backer was Harry Klatzco, committeeman of the Forty-sixth ward, who ran Singer for the state senate last fall. Singer took office as treasurer on Jan. 21 and filed his bond for $2,000,000.

He apparently took over the office as Peterson handed it to him. There was no public statement at that time that there was any questionable paper, in lieu of cash, in the city treasury. It is presumed by the politicians that Peterson obtained a complete receipt from Singer for the office and its assets.

Audit Charges Up Shortage.

Consequently the audit of the books by Kearns charges up all of the shortage to Singer. It does not even mention the name of Peterson.

It says: "On April 10, 1931, when the present city treasurer took office, the pay roll and reimbursement accounts, including personal checks, pay roll advances, and other cash advances, aggregated $69,951. Demand was made upon August B. Singer, retiring city treasurer, under date of April 17, 1931, for immediate payment of this amount in cash. This matter was referred by the city treasurer to the corporation counsel on April 17, 1931."

It was then that Mr. Busch served notice on the surety companies of "a probable loss." Since that time Singer's lawyer has handed in $17,000 and he has been given a receipt for that amount.

Reports $29,146 Payments.

"During the period between April 9 and April 30, 1931," reads the treasurer's report to the mayor and controller, "payments totaling $29,146 were received on these personal checks and advances. The balance still unpaid at the close of business on April 30 was $40,204. The unpaid advances aggregating this amount of $40,204 are listed in exhibit 'C' of report."

In that exhibit are listed the items "due from August B. Singer on account of personal checks, pay roll advances and other cash advances."

Two personal checks unpaid are of Bishop Archibald J. Carey Sr., payable to W. D. Carey and indorsed in blank. One is dated March 19 last, for $40, and the other March 21, for $50. Bishop Carey, now dead, was a member of the old civil service commission. The auditor's report does not show why the estate of the colored bishop was not asked to make good these checks.

Listed as Pay Roll Advances.

Three other minor items follow as pay roll advances. One of these was made to Anna Jundh on March 27. The total original "advance" is not shown in the report, but it says that the balance is $45. Another "advance," dated last Feb. 6, is for $100, to James J. Brockett, and a third, dated Jan. 23, is for $290, to E. E. Cole. If these persons had not left the city service it would still be possible to hold up their salary warrants until the debt had been paid.

It has been customary for years for the treasurer to advance salaries to city employés and officials, including aldermen and judges of the Municipal court. Treasurer Kearns has forced all of these to pay up, which is said to account for $12,000 of the amount of shortage gathered in since April 10.

Other Figures in Report.

Then the report gives other figures. Among the pay roll advances approved by Singer while he was treasurer was one to A. B. Singer. That advance was made last Feb. 4 and the balance due is $400. Another advance of $25 was to M. Gault, on April 1.

Under the heading of "other cash advances" was one of $20,234 to "A. B. Singer, less payment of $17,000. Therefore the balance Singer owes on "an advance" to himself is $3,234, according to the report.

Then follow the advances to E. H. Bingham, totaling $36,020. The first of these was for $1,000 on May 27, 1927, less than two months after Peterson assumed the office of treasurer. On June 13, 1927, $1,500 was taken from the treasury and charged against E. H. Bingham. On Oct. 18, 1927, $2,000 was drawn out of the treasury.

Three Withdrawals Listed.

In 1928 three withdrawals were made. One of these, for $1,000, was on Jan. 21; another, for $900, was on March 7, and the third, on Aug 11, was for $720, the report says.

Four "advances of cash" out of treasury were made in 1929 in the name of E. H. Bingham, the audit indicates. The first, on March 19, and the second, on May 28, were for $1,800 each; the third, on Oct. 21, was for $2,560, and the fourth, on Nov. 23, was for $2,700.

On Sept. 30, 1930, there was an "advance" of $12,800. On the 26th of the same month $1,500 was withdrawn from the city treasury and on the following Oct. 11 $3,140 was taken out. The remaining $2,600, charged in the report to Bingham, bears no date.

These are the items "totaling $40,204 due from August B. Singer" listed by the auditors in their report to Treasurer Kearns.

Szymczak Begins Audit.

City Controller Szymczak has started his auditor to working on the treasury books and upon that official audit the city will take action.

The $2,000,000 bond of former Treasurer Singer was originally given to the Indemnity Insurance Company of North America and this company then divided the risk among nine other surety companies as shown in the following list, together with the risk assumed by each:

American Surety Co.	$150,000
Ætna Casualty and Surety Co.	100,000
Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co.	250,000
Mass. Bonding and Insurance Co.	250,000
Fidelity and Deposit Co.	250,000
U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co.	250,000
Constitution Indemnity Co.	100,000
Royal Indemnity Co.	150,000
Indemnity Insurance Co. of N. A.	250,000

Ross Grant of the Indemnity Insurance company has talked with both Peterson and Singer, but he said that he considered the information confidential. He asserted that no proof of loss had been submitted. But it is known that Mr. Grant has notified all of the companies associated with his of the "probable loss" and some of them have been investigating. It is understood that the surety companies expect to be ready to discuss the matter as soon as the city submits its claims.

Furnished Peterson Bond.

These same companies wrote the bond of former Treasurer Peterson. They are interested in the status of the treasury when Peterson turned it over to Singer as well as in the conditions disclosed by Treasurer Kearns.

One friend of the old administration gave it as his opinion yesterday that the "advances" will be found to be "perfectly regular" and according to custom. He added that no censure can possibly attach to Peterson because the advances he obtained have been repaid by his friends, and that Peterson is now reimbursing his friends.

Treasurer Kearns will send a copy of his report to the city council, Mayor Cermak and Controller Szymczak are withholding comment until Szymczak finishes his audit.

START REDEEMING 1929 CITY WARRANTS WITH TAX RECEIPTS

City Controller Szymczak yesterday began the redemption, with interest, of $8,320,000 worth of the 1929 tax anticipation warrants which all branches of the city government have outstanding. The warrants are being redeemed with remittances on 1929 taxes from the county treasurer.

The city has $112,595,000 worth of 1929 warrants outstanding, of which $106,516,000 are held by banks and investors and $6,076,000 by city trust funds. The warrants in the hands of the banks and other investors will be redeemed first, according to the controller.

At a conference between the controller and City Treasurer Kearns a policy was adopted to retire the tax warrants in the order of their numbers before any of the warrants invested in city funds will be retired. This is being done, the controller said, to show good faith to the investing public.

TELL OF RAISING CASH

Stories of the midnight conference in a Congress hotel room on March 25 when cabinet members and other office holders under the old city hall régime raised $40,000 to meet a reported deficit of former City Treasurer Charles S. Peterson were related yesterday by several of the participants.

The statements, pieced together, substantiated on the whole the account of the meeting reported to have been given to the grand jury by Richard W. Wolfe, former commissioner of public works.

Louis E. Golan, who for a short time was assistant city treasurer under Mr. Peterson and later had charge of the so-called "prosperity campaign," readily admitted that he engineered the conference and contributed $5,000 to the fund. He defended his actions as those of a man helping a friend in trouble and said he was willing to tell everything if called before the grand jury.

Reveals Peterson's Plea.

"Mr. Peterson came to me and told me his plight, almost with tears in his eyes," said Golan. "He told me he had advanced himself money on his salary—a customary thing which the treasurer did for judges, aldermen, and other city employés—and that because of private business difficulties he could not pay it back. In order to avoid a scandal and to protect Mr. Peterson, I called together several others and we dug into our pockets and turned the money over to him.

"He gave us securities as collateral for the loan and restored the money to the city treasury. He is paying us back so much each week.

"There was nothing in the transaction that I am ashamed of. All of us acted in good faith. I have consulted my brother, an attorney, about whether I should volunteer to tell the grand jury about it and he advised me to wait until I was called upon. But I am ready to testify and if asked I will give the grand jury the names of the participants."

Mr. Golan asserted that the former mayor knew nothing about the matter, which was purposely kept from him because he was busy campaigning. One of the other participants in the conference, however, said he understood the mayor had been told about it and knew of the conference.

Blatchford Tells Story.

Carter Blatchford, a member of the school board, said that he was informed of the situation about two weeks before the election by Wolfe, former Building Commissioner Chris Paschen, and Robert Perbohner, a member of the board of local improvements.

"I scratched around and got $5,000," he said. "I gave it to them with the understanding that Mr. Ettelson [former corporation counsel] and Mr. Golan would take over Mr. Peterson's properties, including his farm at Sheboygan, Wis., as security. I heard nothing more about it until today."

Paschen admitted that he attended the March 25 meeting, but said he refused to give any money. He said he felt that, although he should help in the election, he couldn't pay to make up another man's shortage, adding that he thought "this man would not have come to my aid if our positions were reversed."

The story of Perbohner was that, although he telephoned Blatchford,

BUILDING MANAGERS URGE PAYMENT OF TAXES BY MAY 15

All owners of real estate in Cook county were urged yesterday by the Building Managers' association to pay their 1929 general taxes on or before May 15, the penalty date. A resolution adopted by the board of directors of the association declares that the payment of taxes is an obligation of all taxpayers and that to delay the payment will only result in the levying of additional interest and penalties.

The 1929 taxes have already been spent by the local governments, the association points out, and tax anticipation warrants against these taxes must be retired to preserve the credit of the city and county. Taxes constitute a lien against property and will remain so until paid, the resolution says.

Only in a few special cases where the property has been grossly over valued or the tax on the particular property is illegal for some other cause, would the owner be justified in withholding payment of the taxes, according to the association. Even in such special cases only the portion of the tax objected to should be withheld and then only on the advice of legal counsel, the resolution says.

Youth Tries to Strike Woman in Court; Seized

John Johnson, 19 years old, 1358 West Erie street, interrupted a trial in the Criminal court room of Judge Charles A. Williams yesterday when he attempted to hit Mrs. Josephine Mattrica, 725 West Ohio street, who asserted that he had tried to frighten her out of testifying against two youths who had attempted to rob her. A bailiff struck Johnson, blackening one of his eyes, and then placed him under arrest. He was released when Mrs. Mattrica refused to prosecute. The trial of the youths, James Kelly and Peter Laverdi, was continued.

JUDGE REJECTS PLEA IN SUIT OF LATE E. E. COLE

Circuit Judge Stanley Klarkowski yesterday ruled against the late Ernest E. Cole in the suit he filed more than a year ago to compel the board of education to reinstate him as an assistant superintendent of schools. Mr. Cole died on Feb. 18.

Mr. Cole was first assistant superintendent of schools from 1919 until 1923, when the office was abolished by the school trustees. In his suit he contended that he was removed from the superintendent's staff in violation of the Otis law. In upholding the school board's demurrer to the suit the judge ruled that Mr. Cole had forfeited his right to the job by his failure to bring legal action at an earlier date.

Attorney Emory Smith, who represented Mr. Cole, announced that he would appeal the decision in an effort to collect some $35,000 in back salary which had also been claimed in the suit, for his client's estate.

N. Y. BLOCK MADE BATTLEFIELD TO CAPTURE KILLER

Fights Bullets and Tear Gas Two Hours.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—A youthful bad man lost his gangland brayado and surrendered to police early tonight after the most spectacular bandit siege the east has ever seen.

A fashionable Riverside drive neighborhood was turned into a battlefront to capture Francis [Two-Gun] Crowley, undersized 20 year old killer wanted for two murders. Rifles, shotguns, revolvers, submachine guns and gas bombs made a no-man's land of a block in 91st street just off Riverside drive for two hours.

Three hundred police took part in the battle. More than 1,000 shots were fired. Ten thousand persons were attracted to the scene and many narrowly escaped the hail of bullets. Jagged holes were chopped in the roof of a five story apartment building, through which the besiegers poured a rain of lead and gas bombs.

Girl and Slayer Pal with Him.

With Crowley when he was carried, gun-sick and wounded four times in the legs and arms, from the bullet-pocked apartment, were his pal, Rudolph Durlinger, himself a fugitive murderer, and Crowley's latest sweetheart, Helen Walsh, a 16 year old girl who was with him two nights ago when he shot and killed Patrolman Frederick Hirsch in a Long Island lover's lane.

Crowley and his companions were trapped like rats and fought as rats fight when cornered. Durlinger and the girl were slightly nicked by bullets. None of them had any fight left when they were brought to the street. The girl came first, screaming. Durlinger marched out sullenly, head down. Crowley emerged on a stretcher, moaning.

Confesses Branner Slaying.

Later tonight Durlinger, according to the police, confessed that he and not Crowley killed Virginia Branner, dance hall hostess, ten days ago in Yonkers. He said his motive had been jealousy. Crowley also "talked" at the hospital where he was taken. He admitted killing the Long Island policeman. The girl, the first to recover her composure, asked for a cigaret and, between puffs, calmly admitted she was in the car with "Killer" Crowley when he shot Patrolman Hirsch.

During the ride to the hospital Crowley told also of shooting and wounding a Bronx policeman, George Schmidt, a month ago. Crowley attempted to assume blame for the killing of the Branner girl, notwithstanding his pal's confession.

Found by Two Detectives.

Credit for the capture of the trio belongs to two detectives who traced the fugitives to the West 90th street apartment through information that it had been rented for several months by Billie Dunne, another of Crowley's sweethearts. The detectives went there early this afternoon, set a watch and soon discovered the man they wanted was there. Knowing that the 110 pound swaggering gunman had boasted that he would resist being captured alive, the detectives put in a call for reserves.

Police were stationed all about the building, posted in nearby hallways, on the roofs with machine guns and rifles and in windows looking down upon the top floor apartment occupied by Crowley. A picked detachment went inside and climbed the stairway to the top landing.

Gun Battle Opened.

"Come out, Crowley," they shouted, "we've got you trapped."

"Come in and get me, you ——!" replied the fugitive, firing through the door which commanded the stair well. The invaders retreated, shooting.

Then the real battle began. Police snipers and machine gunners on the adjacent roofs and from window ledges opened a steady fire on the windows of the Crowley apartment. On top of the building the wrecking squad chopped holes in the roof with axes and crowbars, and the police began to fire and toss in tear gas bombs.

Meanwhile, a crowd of more than 10,000 persons had gathered in West End avenue, near the besieged house. They surged against police lines, breaking through at times into dangerous "no man's land" and retreating with tears streaming down their faces from the gas. Traffic in the vicinity was blocked and the rush hour flood of automobiles piued up for half a mile.

Bursts of rifle fire and the roar of shotguns continued to sound from the house. Smoke and gas which had collected in the hallway burst through the bullet shattered street windows in white puffs.

Subdued by Tear Gas.

Finally the tear gas began to have its effect. Crowley and Durlinger staggered near the windows for air. The girl thrust her blond head outside.

"Help, help," she cried, and suddenly was yanked back inside by one of the men. The men continued to fire until their ammunition apparently was exhausted.

Then the hide away of the killer become quiet. Those on the roof heard the girl cry weakly:

"For God's sake don't shoot us. We'll surrender."

Crowley shouted up to his captors:

The door opened and Crowley staggered into the hallway, falling on his face. The others followed and the battle was over.

Even when captured Crowley had hopes of shooting his way to freedom. His two automatic pistols, which he said he had thrown away, were found in his trousers leg, barrels down his socks and butts clasped by his garters. They were still loaded and had they not been found Crowley might have won his freedom en route to the hospital.

Writes Flamboyant Epitaph.

An unsigned note, believed written by Crowley, was found in the apartment when detectives broke in. It read in part:

"To whom it may concern:

"I was born on the 31st. She was born on the 13th. Guess it was fate that made us mate. When I die put a lily in my hand. Underneath my coat will lie a weary kind heart that wouldn't harm anything. I hadn't anything else to do. That's why I went around bumping off cops. . . . There is a couple of bulls at the door and saying 'some hear.' I'm behind the door with three lights, one which belongs to my friend who put on weight so quick in Merrick [Patrolman Hirsch.] He would have gotten me if his bullets were any good. Tell them that I died singing."

"If I die wave my hair and make me look pretty and my face up. Do my nails all over. I always wanted everybody to be happy and have a good time."

Another of the girl's notes read:

"Everybody thinks he is so hard. He can't be when he has cooked my breakfast and washed a pair of pajamas for me to sleep in."

Girl Tells of Battle.

At the police station, asked what she did during the shooting this afternoon, the girl said:

"Sometimes I would get under the bed. Sometimes I would get on it and pull all the covers around me. Sometimes I would try to hide in a corner. The noise was terrific, and things kept going by my head."

Detectives said she did not get under the bed during the last part of the battle. Durlinger, a stocky man weighing 200 pounds, was occupying all the space under the bed the police said. Only Crowley was fighting at the last.

Several hours after the capture had been made, the gas was still so strong in the halls of the besieged house that the tenants had not been permitted to return to their apartments. An explanation of how the occupants of the room had been able to withstand the tear gas attack for so long a period was offered by detectives of the bomb squad. They said that for a long time Crowley and his companions tossed out the tear gas containers as fast as they were thrown into the room. It was not until the attack came from the hole in the roof that they were seriously affected.

House Passes $7,000,000 Bonds for Lincoln Park

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Extension of Lincoln park through a $7,000,000 bond issue is provided by the Barbour bill, which passed the house today and now goes to the governor. The measure provides for submission of the bonds to a referendum vote. Not to exceed $3,000,000 may be issued in 1932, $2,000,000 in 1933, and $2,000,000 in 1934. The bill, which was introduced Jan. 14, enables the raising of funds for the development along the lake shore from the Municipal pier north, contemplated in the plans of the Lincoln park board.

CAPTAIN PTACEK BACKS $227,000 BANK DEPOSITS

Challenges Jury to Prove Anything Dishonest.

Capt. John Ptacek of the Lawndale police station, whose $227,000 bank deposits in the last five years were announced yesterday by the special grand jury investigating corruption in the police department, last evening offered $1,000 to charity if the jurors or any one else can show that he ever "took a dishonest dollar."

The captain made no effort to hide the fact of his wealth and even revealed that he holds a mortgage against Lawrence [Dago] Mangano, said to be the head of the Capone vice, booze and gambling syndicate in the Des Plaines police district.

The records of Ptacek's accounts are reported to be the highest found by the jury, with two possible exceptions. One high police official has accounts, it is reported, which may go far above those of the captain.

Accounts in Several Banks.

Capt. Ptacek's accounts were found scattered in several banks, the jury reported, and showed total deposits of $227,000 in the last five years. The amounts of withdrawals in the corresponding period were not made public, although the additional fact that $15,000 has been deposited by the captain since Jan. 1 was announced.

The account credited to Ptacek is the largest yet found for an ordinary captain, it was reported. The next highest is an account of $150,000, which was discovered in the first batch of accounts taken in by the jury at the start of the investigation. This last account, however, has many stock market transactions involved and the jurors are having difficulty, it is reported, deciphering the bank records.

All Records in Hand.

When the jury took an adjournment last evening until Monday, it was announced that the bank records of Acting Commissioner Alcock, First Deputy James B. Scanlan, Chief of Detectives John Norton, and every captain in the department, with two exceptions, are in hand. These records will be scrutinized, and every captain or official with an account not justified by the $4,000 yearly salary will be called on to explain.

"I made it all honestly on the stock market and in real estate," said Capt. Ptacek in explaining his wealth.

"My parents left me two flat buildings when they died. I invested all the income of these buildings in other real estate and in stocks and bonds. I own stock in various large corporations. I deal actively in real estate mortgages, through the Lawndale Agency and Loan association.

"I have never taken a dishonest dollar and I welcome the grand jury investigation. I will give $1,000 to any charity or orphanage if the jury or any one else can prove that I made money other than in an honest way. I will gladly give the jurors any records I have."

The captain, a veteran on the department, then disclosed that among the mortgages he holds as a result of purchases from the Lawndale agency is the one against Mangano. This nets him $370 per year, he said. He said, however, that he does not know Mangano.

Roosevelt Road Will Be Kept Open During Building

Announcement was made yesterday that Roosevelt road will be kept open as an automobile highway near Glen Ellyn this summer while new construction is in progress. The Roosevelt Road Business Men's association in Glen Ellyn has obtained a promise from the state highway department that a temporary road will be made through the grounds of the Glenbard golf course.

IF THE WORLD WAS STARTLED THEN

We repeat . . . if the world was startled then . . . what will happen Saturday? We admit the folks back in 1913 had good cause to be startled at Benson & Rixon's origination of the 2-pants suit, which introduced a new value-giving era in the clothing industry. But they did not have half the reason to be startled as they will have when Benson & Rixon's new loop store on State St. opens. The big news will be announced in this newspaper tomorrow. Don't miss it!

CERMAK TO ASK DELAY IN SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION

Myers Ready to Quit if Mayor Asks.

Mayor Cermak told reporters yesterday that he will ask the board of education to postpone its annual election, now tentatively scheduled for May 20.

LEWIS E. MYERS.

That was his reply to a statement by Lewis E. Myers, president of the board, that he is willing to hand in his resignation if the mayor asks for it. Mr. Myers is considered a candidate for reelection, but the mayor indicated a belief that an election should not be held under the present conditions.

"I shall suggest," Mr. Cermak said, "that the election be postponed until the situation is clarified, until we know exactly where we stand, what the relationship is to be between the administration and the board."

But in more direct comment on the offer of the board president's resignation the mayor indicated an unwillingness to ask Mr. Myers to get out.

"I don't contemplate asking for his resignation," he said.

Myers Willing to Resign.

"Since I expressed myself yesterday," said President Myers, "I have thought the matter over and have come to the conclusion that if the mayor wants my resignation and asks for it he can have it. But he will have to ask for it."

It is understood that Mr. Myers has an appointment to see Mayor Cermak today. The subject of the postponement of the election for thirty days or longer is scheduled for discussion.

Following the board president's expression of willingness to retire at the mayor's pleasure, two other holdover trustees were asked if Mr. Myers' declaration had influenced their attitudes.

"If Mayor Cermak should ask for my resignation," was the substance of Trustee James A. Hemingway's reply, "I should take the request under consideration."

"Not at all," answered Trustee H. Wallace Caldwell, former president under the last administration. "I wouldn't turn in my resignation if Mayor Cermak asked for it on bended knees."

In discussing this subject, Mayor Cermak was particularly emphatic in denying the assertion of Trustee Joseph P. Savage, the most recent appointee of the last administration, that there are fewer temporary appointees on the pay roll of the schools now than there were in 1927 at the close of Mayor Dever's term. Savage had said that there now are only 332 such employes.

Mayor Finds 1,188 Jobs.

"The fact is," said the mayor, "that there were 365 temporary appointees four years ago and now there are 1,188. And they certified 89 good positions under civil service just before the last administration left office.

"If the majority of that board has decided to go along by themselves without consideration for the aims of the administration they'll find themselves unable to get very far. They won't have any money to go on as they're going now and the legislature won't grant them any more under the present conditions.

"If the legislature asks me if the school board needs any more money I'll say that what they need is not more money but more economy.

"It doesn't make any personal difference to me who the individuals are on the board of education if they are capable and are in harmony with the administration's policy of economy, but there has been no real proof of that kind of harmony up to this time."

Cermak and Swanson Confer.

Out of a long series of conferences during the day the one that Mayor Cermak held with State's Attorney Swanson attracted most attention in the city hall. The two were closeted for more than half an hour, at the end of which both said that the principal topic of conversation was that of cooperation between the prosecutor's office and the police department.

"Among other things," said Mr. Swanson, "we discussed the fact that Chicago's reputation has been hurt unfairly by the hooking up of all sorts of crimes to gang wars when many of them have utterly no relations with such wars.

"If a murder occurs, even if it is simply the result of a drunken brawl that might happen anywhere, it is immediately heralded as the work of the Capone mob or some other gang.

"The way to combat that sort of thing is to drive Capone and his kind out of the picture here in Chicago and that can be done by aggressive, persistent action."

The mayor was said to have told the state's attorney that the complete responsibility for crime conditions is squarely on the shoulders of Acting Commissioner Alcock and that the present chief is not being interfered with in any way by the administration.

In connection with the subject of crime, Marshal Keig, president of the Commonwealth club, made public a letter he had received from Mayor Cermak indorsing the bail bond legislation being sought by the organization at Springfield.

Can Collect Millions for County.

"The passage of the proposed laws," read the letter, "will aid Chicago materially in reestablishing itself economically and socially.

"For one thing, the collection of millions of dollars due Cook county for bond forfeitures will help reduce the tax burden the property owner must now bear. Secondly, the passage of these bills will be a warning to criminals that Chicago means business in prosecuting them.

"I believe that the passage of these laws will reduce to a minimum the number of bond forfeitures and will act as a deterrent to criminals and their allies who have taken advantage of the lax laws under which the city is waging its war against crime. I hope that members of the house will aid Chicago by passing the bail bond bills."

Propose Transit Arbitration.

In a letter to the mayor, the transportation committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board, of which John U. Smyth is chairman, proposed the creation of an arbitration committee to endeavor to dispose of the court cases now involving the transit consolidation ordinance.

"It is our firm belief," read the letter, "that if your honor would appoint an arbitration committee, with no legal powers to enforce its findings, consisting of bankers, realtors, members of various civic associations and representatives of the press, to sit in a spirit of meditation and hear all the differences, that these legal questions might be ironed out by the force of public opinion and the spirit of 'I Will.'"

A CITY OFFICIAL IS PROFITEER IN N.Y. REAL ESTATE

Buys 261 Lots as School Board Acquires Site.

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Two city officials, one of whom made money in real estate and the other in the stock market, shared the center of the stage today in the investigation of profiteering in sites for public schools being conducted by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Leonard Wallstein.

Morris Warschauer, assistant secretary of the board of education, admitted that he had banked sums during various months from 1925 to 1929 from $500 to $2,000 in excess of his salary of $6,000 a year, and explained that his brother made the money for him in the stock market.

Tells How It's Done.

The other official, Francis T. McEneny, chief examiner to the aldermanic president, testified that on Nov. 25, 1925, the very day that the board of education recommended purchase of a school site in Springfield, Queens, he paid $500 for a thirty day option on 261 lots a few blocks from that site.

Mr. McEneny later took Mr. Warschauer and Joseph Miller Jr., secretary of the board of education, into his real estate venture and on this deal Mr. Warshauer, so successful in the stock market, lost money.

His position in the aldermanic president's office enabled him to learn in advance of proposals to buy school sites, Mr. McEneny admitted, and he and his friends made considerable investments in real estate in Brooklyn and more particularly in Queens. But when Mr. Wallstein asked him if he knew on the day he took the option in Springfield of the proposed purchase by the city, he said:

'No, I did not learn of it until December, 1925, when it appeared on the calendar of the committee of the whole for action."

Recorded in Sister's Name.

It was brought out further in his testimony that he did not take title to the lots until May 11, 1926. Meanwhile there had been some controversy about the site because it would have blocked off a proposed street, and it was not until March 25, 1926, that the board of estimate approved the purchase after plans had been revised so that the street could be opened. Until after this approval was given Mr. McEneny's only investment in the lots was the $500 option. Later, it developed that McEneny had recorded the lots in the name of his sister.

Mr. Warschauer, taking the stand later in the afternoon, testified that until four or five weeks ago it was the practice of the board of education to admit to their meetings at which school sites were discussed a number of prominent condemnation lawyers.

Asked how he obtained the $2,200 he put into the Springfield deal estate, he said that his brother had carried an account for him in the brokerage house of Sartoris & Smith from 1925 until 1929. It was in the broker's name, he said, and it was closed with a profit of $14,000 just before the market crash. His brother, he said, always paid him his profits in cash from $500 to $7,000 at a time.

JORDAN DENIED DELAY; GOES ON TRIAL MONDAY

CRIMINAL COURT.

George Calimus and Louis Tappel, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Philip Finnegan.

Frank E. Jordan, bank robber, who murdered Policemen Anthony Ruthy and Patrick Durkin when they attempted to stop his escape last Thursday, must go to trial on Monday before Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court. He was refused a further continuance yesterday when his attorneys were unable to give valid legal reason as to why he could not be ready for trial.

State's Attorney Swanson, who is pressing the prosecution, said that the mythical 30 day rule set by the Supreme court years ago in the Earl Dear case does not apply in criminal cases. He said that the 30 day rule only applies where a defendant gives some reason as to why he needs that much time to prepare a defense.

Jordan was visited yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Maude Carlson of Rock Island. His sister, Mrs. Esther Showalter, also visited the jail.

U. S. LOOKS INTO TAX RETURNS OF DENNIS COONEY

Demands Bank Records of Capone Vice Monger.

Another Capone gangster, Dennis Cooney, south side vice monger, is in trouble with the government over his income taxes. This became known yesterday when Federal Judge John P. Barnes entered an order directing the First National bank either to produce the records of Cooney's accounts or to show cause on May 14 why they should not be produced.

JUDGE BARNES.

The petition for the court order, presented by Assistant United States Attorney Dwight H. Green and Samuel Clawson, stated that the income tax affairs of Cooney had been under investigation for several months, and that although he filed returns for the years 1929 to 1930, inclusive, his schedules were questioned.

Bank Demands Court Order.

It is further set forth that when, on May 4, William J. Elmore, agent of the special intelligence unit, which investigates income tax frauds, went to the bank to examine Cooney's accounts he was informed that the records would not be produced without Cooney's permission or a court order.

It was reported that the government agents had experienced difficulty with the bank with respect to records of several of its clients' accounts, the bank's policy being not to turn over the record without permission of its clients. No other Chicago bank has refused access to its records by revenue agents, federal prosecutors said.

Cite Court Decision.

Mr. Green and Mr. Clawson quoted a Supreme court decision giving the agents authority to examine bank accounts in income tax cases, and declared that "banks should coöperate to the fullest extent with the government in its income tax drive against gangsters and brothel keepers."

A statement issued by the First National bank said: "It has always been our policy that we have no right to produce records of our customers' accounts on the mere request of the revenue agents. We feel that we owe a duty to our customers. It is our desire to coöperate fully with the government if our customers consent to the examination of their accounts, but until they do we do not believe that the law requires us to produce such records without a court order.

Obtain Cooney Consent.

"In the Cooney case, Mr. Elmore was informed that the records he desired would be produced if Mr. Cooney consented. We were unable to reach Mr. Cooney until Friday, when he authorized us to turn over the records. Then we called Mr. Elmore, who was not in, and left word for him to call, which he did not do."

Tony [Mops] Volpe, another Capone gangster who is facing deportation to Italy as an undesirable, was again summoned to appear before the federal grand jury yesterday, presumably in connection with the government's investigation into Al Capone's income tax affairs. Others subpoenaed, who were seen in the federal building with Volpe, were Pete Penovitch, George [K. O.] Brown, former prize fighter; Thomas Sterling, Peter Topoorlas, and Nick Gianacakis, all alleged Capone gamblers, and North Side Frankie Pope, so-called "millionaire newsboy," who drifted into the Cicero gambling racket.

Fined for Auto Mishap

Boston, Mass., May 7.—[Special.]—Mrs. Minerva Aronson Raskob, daughter-in-law of John J. Raskob, the Democratic national chairman, was fined $20 in East Cambridge District court today as a result of an auto accident in which she ran down and injured an Arlington man.

Despite efforts of the Raskob family to obtain a private hearing of the case, the charges against Mrs. Raskob were heard in open court before Judge Louis Green. The specific charges were driving so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public and passing on the left of a street car. On the second she pleaded guilty and the fine was imposed.

Police of both Cambridge and Arlington, apparently eager to aid the Raskob family in avoiding publicity, attempted to impede newspaper men. A Cambridge officer arrested one news cameraman in the courthouse corridor for disturbing the peace, although his camera was not in position, and an Arlington police official in whose car Mrs. Raskob rode threatened to run down reporters and photographers.

BAR DISCIPLINARY POWER OF DEANS OF WISCONSIN U.

Madison, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—The faculty of the University of Wisconsin has voted to take away all disciplinary powers from the dean of men and the dean of women. President Glenn Frank had urged for nearly two years that this step be taken.

In arriving at the decision the full faculty rode roughshod over the recommendations of a committee that had been appointed to investigate the matter. This report urged that the disciplinary powers of Deans Scott H. Goodnight and Louise Nardin be kept and supported by faculty and students.

The opposition faculty, which finally prevailed, charged that this report was an attempt to continue the deans as "Mussolinis" by making them immune to criticism. Prof. W. H. Twenhofel, who signed the discarded report, resigned from his committee and a new one was appointed by President Frank, who urged that its members establish a system of student advisers without disciplinary powers at once.

FOURTEEN DIE IN JAPANESE FIRES; LOSS $2,000,000

TOKIO, May 7.—(AP)—Fourteen persons, all Japanese, were burned to death and property valued at $2,000,000 was destroyed in a series of fires which swept various Japanese communities today. High winds hindered firemen.

The most destructive fire was at Yamanaka Hot Springs, where four lives were lost. Thirty hotels were wiped out, 100 persons were injured and 4,000 made homeless. The flames also destroyed 800 frail Japanese dwellings, the business section of the resort, postoffice, police stations, banks, the town hall, a temple and school houses.

Four persons were burned to death in Yokohama by a fire which destroyed the Chinese consulate and 60 dwellings. In Tokio six persons lost their lives in a fire which swept the thickly populated Shiba ward. A fire in Toyama City destroyed 47 homes; 53 dwellings were burned at Akamatsu.

VOTE EXEMPTION ON GAS TAX FOR BUSES IN CITIES

Fight Brews to Include Other Vehicles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—The door was thrown open today for a fight in the senate next week to exempt delivery wagons, trucks, taxicabs and other automobiles which do not travel outside a city's limits from payment of gasoline tax. The senate passed the Huebsch bill, taking from under the gas tax motor buses which pay franchise charges to one or more municipal corporations and operate wholly within a city or village. A motion to reconsider was tabled after stirring up a warm exchange.

"If a motor bus company is going to be exempt from the gas tax when it plies within a city limits," said Senator Roy O. Woods [Rep., Chicago], "I'm for exempting all automobile vehicles which do not use the hard roads built by gas tax money."

Would Exempt Others.

"I'm for exempting not only buses, but taxis, delivery wagons, doctors' cars, and other vehicles which use only the city streets," said Senator Harold Kessinger [Rep., Aurora].

"Farm implements were taken out because they do not use the highways," said Senator Simon Lants [Rep., Congerville]. "I'm for taking out buses for the same reason."

"Other people are interested besides bus companies," said Mr. Woods. "Why is a bus company owned by capital entitled to greater privilege than others who operate vehicles that travel only over a city street?"

Too Many Auto Taxes.

"We've got a triplicate system of revenue extortion from motorists," said Mr. Kessinger. "Some states have licenses, or a gas tax, or a road bond issue to build hard roads. In Illinois we made the mistake of using them all. We're in a class by ourselves in extracting money from motorists."

"Well," said Senator Thomas Courtney, minority leader, "this opens the gate for an effort to exempt from the hard road gas tax vehicles which never use the hard roads."

Award Three Contracts for Sewage Plant Work

Contracts for the installation of equipment in the Calumet sewage treatment plant, 125th street and Cottage Grove avenue, were awarded yesterday at a meeting of the sanitary district board. The total cost of the work will be $282,929. The concerns awarded contracts are the Allis Chalmers company, $69,500 for pumps; the Elliott company, $36,500 for blowers, and the Chapman Valve company, $26,929 for valves.

No on Raised Highway Turns Chicago to Gas Tax Split

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Gov. Emmerson's refusal to build an elevated highway in Chicago aroused opposition to the administration's road legislation program today.

MICHAEL IGOE.

"The only chance for Chicago to get a fair deal," said Michael Igoe [Dem., Chicago], minority leader in the house, "is for the Cook county delegation to support the 1-1-1 distribution of the gasoline tax revenue."

With the motor fuel excise divided equally between the state, the counties, and the municipalities, as provided by the Galvin bill, Chicago would receive between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 during the next biennium, more than sufficient for two years' work on an elevated highway. Mayor Cermak has said that if the Galvin bill passes he will build a superhighway for the west side with gasoline funds and with no increase in taxes.

Gives Chicago Nothing.

"Gov. Emmerson's program," said Thomas Courtney [Dem., Chicago], minority leader of the senate, "provides that Chicagoans will continue to pay millions of dollars for the state's roads and receive practically nothing in return."

Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, who has been a stanch supporter of the governor's policies and who is a colonel on the governor's staff, advocated an amendment to the administration's road appropriation bill to provide for a $5,000,000 fund to start an elevated highway in Chicago. The bill, as it passed the house and is now pending in the senate, provides $7,000,000 for municipal construction out of a total biennium appropriation of $107,000,000.

"Out of the total of $107,000,000," said Representative Igoe, "Chicago motorists will pay between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. That's the way the millions have been taken away from Chicago year after year and the state hasn't returned a penny to the city's streets.

Concession Amounts to Little.

"Now that the Galvin bill threatens to return some of the gasoline money to the municipalities, Gov. Emmerson has made a concession. But what does it amount to? The most sanguine interpretation of the administration's promises would give Chicago's streets only $8,500,000 during the next two years as contrasted with the $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 that Chicago motorists will be paying to the state in gasoline taxes and registration fees."

"In return for this pittance from the state," said Senator Courtney, "Chicago is losing control over its streets. The state is being given authority to route state highway traffic over pavement bought by abutting property owners through special assessments and bar residents from parking in front of their homes on this pavement that they have paid for.

"If the residents object to trucks, and buses, and fast through traffic being routed in front of their homes there will be no local authority for them to appeal to. They must come down to Springfield and make their plea before officials who certainly cannot appreciate Chicago's problems as well as Chicagoans."

Opposes 1-1-1 Distribution.

"I agree with Gov. Emmerson," said Mr. Hayes, "that the first duty of his administration is to complete the bond issue systems which were approved by the electorate at the polls. However, since the administration is recognizing its further obligation to connect these rural highways with city streets, I think the $7,000,000 allotted for municipal construction might well be raised to $12,000,000 so the state could construct the first section of an elevated highway for Chicago in the next two years.

"I am opposed to the 1-1-1 distribution of the gasoline revenue. The interests of the motorists are best served by letting the state retain the bulk of the tax revenue. The state highway department has an excellent record of past performance. If the state will now build through cities as well as it has built rural highways in the past, the loss of lives in traffic accidents will be reduced and the economic loss from congestion will be alleviated."

Cities Denied Aid.

"The governor admits," said Senator Igoe, "that the bond issue system as contemplated by the legislature and the electorate consists of continuous pavements through the state, unbroken by city limits. He admits that the weak sections of such a system lie in municipalities where through traffic has worn out pavements bought with special assessments. He cannot deny that the automobile owners in these cities are paying their share of the state's road costs. Yet he is denying them their share of the state's road improvements, just as other downstate administrations did before him."

2 WIVES CLAIM HUSBAND AFTER ONE KILLS HIM

Shortly after the stabbing Mrs. Edith Loewe of 2950 Lincoln avenue, mother of three children, appeared on the scene. She said she was Loewe's real wife and did not know of his dual life. The other woman asserted she was married to Loewe at Aurora in 1926.

According to the story Lovelle Loewe told Lieut. Jens P. Hansen of the Town Hall station, Loewe quarreled with her over money and chased her with a meat cleaver.

BUTKE FAMILY PROMISES TO REPAY COUNTY

Emil A. Butke, brother of Fred A. Butke, who committed suicide in Chicago on Monday night after investigation had revealed that he was short $85,000 in his accounts as auditor of Kane county, appeared yesterday before the Kane county board of supervisors.

"The Butke family has authorized me to say they will see to it that Kane county is repaid every penny it has coming to it," he said. "Whatever the audit shows was taken from the county the family will return."

Attorney John P. Hart, representing Mrs. Marjorie Butke, the widow for whom a trust fund of $83,000 was created by Butke just before he ended his life on Monday, said he would insist on proof that the fund was established with stolen money. He said the nature of the trust was such as to indicate it was not the idea of a man who expected to die immediately, but rather of a man who expected to live at least thirty years more. He said he believed Butke at the time intended to return to his home in Aurora, but on leaving the trust company's offices saw in the newspapers that he was accused of embezzling and had become panic stricken and shot himself. He said Butke made $17,000 in the last year in his private auditing business.

FIRE CAUSE $15,000 LOSS.

Damage estimated at $15,000 was caused yesterday by a fire in a dry kiln of the National Sewing Machine company factory at 1147 West Ohio street. A large quantity of hardwood lumber was destroyed.

Follow These Simple Rules:

1. Each evening for 42 consecutive evenings (not including Saturdays) W-G-N will broadcast 3 verses of yesterday's "Tune Tangles." On each day following the broadcast the Chicago Tribune will print a "Tune Tangle" Crossword Puzzle. Each puzzle will contain the title of one of the songs broadcast the preceding evening. You are invited to listen to the broadcast, solve the Tune Tangle Crossword in the next day's Tribune and name the song.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of answers in accordance with these rules. NOTE: This means that you do not necessarily have to solve each of the 42 Tune Tangles consecutively to win. The prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest.

3. The prizes are as follows:

2nd Prize		500.00
3rd Prize		250.00
Next 2 Prizes,	$100.00 each	200.00

Next 10 Prizes,	25.00 each	250.00
Next 100 Prizes,	10.00 each	1,000.00
Next 310 Prizes,	5.00 each	1,550.00
430 Prizes, Totaling		$5,000.00

4. This offer is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. Tune Tangle Crosswords are to be submitted only in complete sets. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately. Hold all puzzles until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Tune Tangles," Chicago Tribune, Post office Box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight, 10 days after Puzzle No. 42 has been printed.

6. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Postoffice Department. Contestants may submit as many sets of puzzles as they wish, but the same contestant will be entitled to win first one prize.

7. You need not buy the Chicago Tribune. You may copy the tunes and words and send them in. The Chicago Tribune may be consulted during office hours or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

SENATORS COME TO CONFER WITH CERMAK TODAY

Will Discuss Program of Tax Legislation.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—A senate subcommittee on revenue left for Chicago tonight for a conference with Mayor Cermak at the city hall tomorrow afternoon on a program of revenue measures acceptable to the metropolitan area. It is headed by Senator Earl B. Searcy [Rep., Springfield] and its other members are Senators Henry M. Dunlap [Rep., Savoy], Simon E. Lantz [Rep., Congerville], Francis J. Loughran [Dem., Chicago], and R. V. Graham [Dem., Chicago].

EARL B. SEARCY.

The conferees expect to discuss the Schaechenberg bills for abolition of the Cook county board of assessors. More particularly, however, they plan to take up the question of uncovering new sources of revenue, some for permanent use and some for operation during the financial stringency due to the tax muddle in Cook county.

Tobacco Bill Before Senate.

The proposal for a tax on smokers that is expected to extract $20,000,000 a year from Lady Nicotine is likely to be among the measures discussed. It came before the senate today in the form of a bill introduced jointly by Senators Richard R. Meents [Rep., Ashkum], Martin R. Carlson [Rep., Moline], and Harry G. Wright [Rep., De Kalb].

The tobacco tax bill aims to impose a tax of 1 mill on every cigaret, or 2 cents on a packet of 20; and a 10 per cent tax on the retail price of cigars and manufactured tobacco, including chewing tobacco.

The bill says retailers shall be licensed, under the state treasurer. Dealers are to purchase from him six stamps to be affixed to the packages. Agents may be appointed to handle the stamps at a commission of 3 per cent. An appropriation of $400,000 is carried for administering the tax.

Other Tax Bills Offered.

Another revenue bill introduced gives the state tax commission power to assess and value all oil and gas pipe lines, railroad equipment of all freight car companies and express companies, sleeping car companies and all railroad rolling stock, except that of railroad companies, and all motor bus equipment in interstate business. The avowed purpose is uniformity, and in the case of the pipe lines the assessment is to be allocated to the counties on the basis of mileage.

A companion bill provides for a tax at average state rates on all motor bus equipment in interstate business and on rolling stock of freight car companies, express car companies, taxis, refrigerator car companies, and all railroad rolling stock except that of railroad companies. It is proposed that such a tax be paid into the state treasury.

Income Tax Bill Draws Fire.

The Lantz income tax, which was passed by the senate, drew a bulletin today from the civic federation.

"It would tend in many cases to disclose intangible holdings, and to expose them to the confiscatory operation of the antiquated and unjust personal property tax, thereby discouraging investments in Illinois and making still more difficult the problem of real estate owners and of business generally," says the bulletin.

"The proposed income tax is to take the place of the state property tax, which amounts to less than 7 per cent of the average tax bill in cities, and therefore will give to taxpayers no relief whatever from local taxes, which make up about 93 per cent of the total tax bill in most cities and at least 90 per cent in the rural communities. It would encourage, if not virtually compel, large and wholly unnecessary expenditures by the state."

The belief that Gov. Emmerson's veto of the repeal of the state prohibition law has aided the cause of national prohibition reform was expressed yesterday by Mrs. George E. Brennan, state legislative chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

MRS. BRENNAN.

"The governor's act has done more to crystallize sentiment among the people of the state who didn't know where they stood than anything else," Mrs. Brennan declared at a luncheon of the Crusaders, men's prohibition reform organization, in the Bismarck hotel. "That is going to help considerably in the fight next year."

Mrs. Brennan in reporting on the national convention of the women's organization held in April in Washington, D. C., told of a growth in membership from 100,000 a year ago to 300,000 last month.

Mrs. William H. Mitchell, co-chairman of the Illinois division of the women's organization, told of the growth in membership in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Illinois, and the District of Columbia, which have in two years exceeded the membership of the W. C. T. U. In three states, she reported, Michigan, Massachusetts, and New York, membership has more than doubled the older organization.

HOUSE ADOPTS U. OF I. BUDGET OF $11,345,000

Represents $435,000 Cut from Original.

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Without a dissenting vote, the house of representatives today passed the University of Illinois budget of $11,345,000 to maintain the institution for the next biennium.

As passed, the budget represents a cut of $435,000 from the original request of the trustees. The board wanted $11,780,000, the additional funds having been intended for an agricultural laboratory and incidentals.

The house appropriations committee believed, however, that the laboratory could wait for better times and lopped it off.

The budget for the current biennium was $12,030,000 and the trustees intended, originally, to request the same amount for 1931-1933. They sliced $250,000 from it when the legislature visited the university two months ago. The bill now goes to the senate.

The house passed the $5,000 appropriation bill creating a commission to represent the state at the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington in Virginia, next Feb. 22.

The commission would consist of fifteen members, who will coöperate with the United States commission in making plans for the celebration. The members would receive no compensation, but would be allowed traveling expenses.

House bills 64 and 65, which provide for the counting of proposition ballots after those of candidates have been counted, passed the house. The present law has the directly opposite effect and has been criticized because it delays the results in important races.

SLAYER SUSPECT IDENTIFIED AS BELLE GUNNESS

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—[Special.]—John Daly, 70, boilermaker, formerly of La Porte, Ind., who today looked at the body of Mrs. Esther Carlson in the Los Angeles county morgue, said: "I am positive she is Belle Gunness."

Mrs. Carlson died here yesterday. She was awaiting trial on charges of poisoning August Lindstrom, wealthy 81 year old retired lumberman, for whom she had been housekeeper for years. The Lindstrom poisoning case was reminiscent in many particulars of the Belle Gunness murders in La Porte in 1908.

Daly, who said he talked with Mrs. Gunness hundreds of times between 1902 and 1908, called at the morgue here on request of Sheriff MacDonald of La Porte. Daly's identification of the woman was corroborated by John A. Yorkey, formerly a liquor dealer at La Porte.

Yorkey identified a photograph taken from Mrs. Carlson's trunk as the likeness of three children of Mrs. Gunness who perished in the Gunness farmhouse fire in 1908 following the discovery of several bodies of poison victims buried on the farm.

Daly revealed that he probably is the only man alive who saw Mrs. Gunness escaping the morning her house was burned.

"With me was a friend—neither of us knowing the Gunness farmhouse had burned during the night—and we saw a heavily veiled woman dressed in black hurrying across the tracks toward the railroad station," Daly said. "I said to my friend, 'There goes Belle Gunness.' I had an impulse at that time to stop her, but I didn't. When we went into the town a few hours later we learned that the farmhouse had been burned, and that it was believed she had burned with it."

Capture Youths Driving Off in 2 Stolen Autos

Two youths, said to be members of the 42 gang, were arrested by Sergts. Conlon and Hanlon of the Hyde Park police as they were driving away with two stolen automobiles at 43d street and Drexel boulevard last night. They are Henry Fross, 20 years old, 1217 South Keeler avenue, and Ben Weiser, 17 years old, 1210 South Union avenue.

UNTANGLE HITCH OVER ILLINOIS' EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—The clouds rolled by in the senate this morning when Senator Richard J. Barr [Rep., Joliet] withdrew his bill to create another Century of Progress commission of the senate with an appropriation of $350,000 for an Illinois building and exhibit.

Senator Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago] last night threatened to withdraw as chairman of the present senate World's Fair commission unless the measure was pulled back. He is author of a bill which passed the senate March 4, creating a commission and appropriating $500,000.

It is now before the house, so Mr. Barr extracted his bill from the hopper today on the understanding that his $350,000 figure would be substituted in the Woods measure in the house.

PASS MEASURE FOR REBUILDING OF SANITARIUM

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Rebuilding of the La Rabida sanitarium for children in Jackson park is provided in a bill which passed the senate today and now goes to the governor for action. Another measure sent to the governor is for abatement of the motor boat exhaust nuisance.

The La Rabida bill would give a group of Chicago women permission to spend $300,000 in the erection of the hospital on a promontory overlooking Lake Michigan at 64th street. As the Mission of La Rabida, the sanitarium existed on the same spot since the 1893 World's fair until a few years ago, when it burned under mysterious circumstances.

Representative Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Mundelein] introduced the boat exhaust bill which prohibits any person operating a boat with an unmuffled exhaust save participants in races.

WANT CHAMBER TO DECLARE FOR WAR DEBT CUTS

European Delegates Raise Issue at Meeting.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—The European drive for the cancellation or reduction of war debts with American taxpayers footing the bill came into the open today at the congress of International Chamber of Commerce.

SENATOR W. K. KING.

The Europeans maneuvered for a declaration by the 1,000 delegates representing 35 countries in favor of a revision of the German reparations and allied war debts settlements as a revision of the German reparation and allied war debts settlements as a means of alleviating the world wide business depression.

Reflecting the attitude of the Hoover administration, which refuses to listen to proposals of reduction or cancellation of the adjusted debts due from the allied nations, the American delegation, headed by Silas Strawn of Chicago, resisted the move of the Europeans. Some members of the American delegation predicted a compromise on a more or less innocuous resolution providing for a further study of the relation of war debts to world economic conditions.

May Not Come to Head.

In the opinion of some delegates the question of reopening the war debt settlements will not come to a head unless Germany should default on payment of her war reparations.

Great Britain and France, each of whom is now receiving from Germany more than she is paying the United States, might then profess inability to pay America. Under the terms of the war debt settlements, however, any debtor nation may at any time exercise the privilege of a three year moratorium.

While this maneuvering in the center ring was in progress the sideshow on the silver question attracted attention. Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah], representing silver producing states; Billy Loeb, Roosevelt's famous secretary, who is now vice president of the American Smelting and Refining company, and delegates from China and India united in a demand for an international conference to study the silver problem.

British Delegates Cool.

The delegates representing Great Britain, which is putting India on a gold basis, were cool to the project for stabilizing silver, but intimated they might agree to the resolution in modified form. Tsuyee Fei, president of the Bank of China, said the Chinese government stands ready to call the conference.

"The British," said Senator King, "are opposing us because they are for the gold standard and fear this move means bimetallism. That's why President Hoover also is cold to the proposition of stabilizing silver."

In the discussion of reparations and war debts over which Melvin Traylor, president of the First National bank of Chicago presided, Dr. Carl Bergman, former German finance minister, said that war reparations are impoverishing Germany and intimated that Germany cannot continue to pay.

Settlement Questioned.

"On first thought it might be surprising," he said, "that the wisdom of the recent reparation settlement is being seriously questioned after such a short interval. The explanation for this phenomenon, however, is to be found in the simple fact that since the time when the negotiations were concluded between the experts the whole world has undergone such a sudden and fundamental change of all underlying economic conditions that a settlement which may have been considered possible of realization at the time in view of the various safeguards, provided for in cases of emergency, must now be looked at much more critically in the face of recent economic developments. The problem of reparation is not yet definitely settled. It still awaits a complete and final economic solution."

Henry Bell, director of Lloyd's bank, London, waxed extremely critical of American policies on the tariff and war debts.

Sees U. S. Misconception.

"What is hurting the world mostly today is, I think, a misconception on the part of the great nation whose guests we are," he said. "They are magnificent hosts, but they are awfully poor customers. The fact is that the United States of America has not appreciated yet how great a nation it is. It has not appreciated that it has become a great creditor nation, and that there are duties attached to being a great creditor nation which must be faced and undertaken.

"Now in my own country before that calamitous war, we derived from the United States of America from our investments something over 175 million dollars and we made no obstacle to take it in cotton, in wheat, in all kinds of things without let or hindrance. The times have changed. When the war came we had to part with our American securities, and instead of being a creditor nation we became a debtor nation; and the position is now on the other side. It is a hundred and fifty million dollars now that we owe to America. And America makes it as difficult as it can to let us pay that hundred and fifty million dollars. The things with which we would like to sell will not be received.

Radical Change, He Says.

"What a change from before the war! How sad it seems to us—I am speaking quite plainly to my American friends and there may be several duels arising from this afterwards, but I must say what I feel. America sells twice as much to Europe as it will take in exchange.

"And we come here today—I am sure without offending our friends at all—to put it up to them as to whether really they will face the new position in which they find themselves, whether they don't feel that in regard to this kind of debts, and possibly in regard to the other kinds of debts which you have just heard a rather large, a rather kinder, a rather better attitude might be taken. We ask them to rise to the responsibility of their great position."

Discussing merchandising and distribution at the plenary session, D. F. Kelly, president of the Fair store, Chicago, opposed legislation recently urged upon congress requiring the retailer to sell nationally advertised and trade marked goods at the price fixed by the manufacturer. He said this opposition of the merchants is founded on the "principle of price freedom."

Installment buying, said Mr. Kelly, reached its peak in 1925 when the total installment sales that year amounted to 6 billion, 179 million dollars. Such liberal granting of credit he pointed out, had enabled the American people "to own and enjoy such things as automobiles, pianos, phonographs, radios, electric refrigerators, washing machines, etc."

Mr. Kelly dwelt on the value of advertising to the retail store, particularly in a period of business depression.

"Newspaper advertising," he said, "is without doubt the most effective medium for the retail store. The other media, in the order of their importance, are direct mail advertising, radio, street car and billboard advertising, window and interior store displays. The results of direct mail advertising vary with the character of clientele to which the store appeals, and to the degree of care with which copy is prepared and mailed.

"Department stores are generally large, consistent users of advertising. This is true not only in normal times, but is especially true during periods of business depressions. By advertising unusual values on a price appeal when there has been a hesitancy of consumer purchasing, merchants have been able to stimulate business with the result industry has likewise shared in the benefits.

"Almost every progressive store conducts at regular intervals special selling events. These special selling events afford us an excellent opportunity to observe the pulling power of our advertising media. There are instances on record where stores have spent $40,000 for one day's advertising and as a result have sold as high as $1,000,000 worth of merchandise in one day."

DR. GUY M. CUSHING IS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CHICAGO ROTARY

Dr. Guy M. Cushing, surgeon, who has been practicing his profession in Chicago since 1899, was elected president of the Rotary club of Chicago last night at the club's annual election dinner in the Medinah Athletic club. Chosen by the club's nominating committee, Dr. Cushing had no opposition.

DR. G. M. CUSHING. [Stiffens Photo.]

Sheldon Clark, Harry F. Harrington, and John J. Mitchell were elected vice presidents. Four directors, the treasurer, and 19 delegates and alternates to the international Rotary convention in Vienna next Month also were elected without opposition.

The dinner program included a speech on "Crime and Its Causes and Cure" by William J. Burns of the Burns Detective agency. Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, Chief of Detectives Norton, Coroner Bundesen, and Thomas C. Callahan, chief of the government's secret service in Chicago, were guests of the club.

Mr. Burns, reviewing the crime problem, said blackmailing has become one of the most serious crimes in America. He said not one-tenth of the blackmailing that is going on ever is reported to the police or to the newspapers because the victims fear not only for their lives but for their reputations.

WOMAN DEFIES NYE QUIZ; KEEPS CANNON SECRETS

Won't Tell How Bishop Spent Political Fund.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Bishop James Cannon Jr. renewed his protests. Miss Ada L. Burroughs, former treasurer of the Cannon inspired anti-Smith campaign in Virginia in 1929, refused to testify. But into the record of the senatorial campaign expenditures committee today went the story of the $65,200 handed over to Bishop Cannon for campaign purposes and the tale of how $43,000 never was reported as required by law and of how the $17,000 that was reported was not reported until six weeks after the legal date.

GERALD P. NYE. [Telegram.]

It was a day of battle and baffle-ment, of skirmishing and circumvention. It testified to the serious intention of the committee to go into the whole Cannon case and the stubborn intention of the bishop not to have the matter dragged out into the light.

Nervous Miss Burroughs.

It cast the nervous Miss Burroughs, with her refrain of "I decline to answer," in the rôle, possibly, of another Harry Sinclair or Sheriff Cunningham, and left her facing a citation by the United States senate for contempt.

It disclosed the bishop in the rôle of a redoubtable financier, handing over $17,000 of the Jameson donations to the anti-Smith committee only to receive in return the committee's check for $17,364 in payment of past sums owing the bishop, but which were not listed in the anti-Smith committee's final report.

It brought from Senator Gerald P. Nye, radical Republican of North Dakota, and chairman of the investigating committee, the assertion that the record of the case shows plainly that some one violated the corrupt practises act. He did not say who in so many words, but he suggested only two candidates—Miss Burroughs, if the bishop told her of the $65,200 contribution of E. C. Jameson of New York and she failed to report it; Bishop Cannon, if he kept the Jameson payments secret until the legal time for filing the final report of contributions was past.

Committee Is Challenged.

In a faint but determined voice Miss Burroughs read a statement protesting against the senate committee's action and challenging its jurisdiction. She maintained that she knew what she was doing and would take the consequences.

Senators Dale of Vermont and Patterson of Missouri, Republicans, and Wagner of New York, Democrat, were on hand when Chairman Nye called the committee to order. Senator Dill, Democrat of Washington, later joined them.

Miss Burroughs, a middle aged woman, looking defiantly at the committee through horn rimmed glasses, refused at first to give her name. It was her typewritten statement that she wanted in the record. Senator Dale protested.

Miss Burroughs finally conceded. Her name went in, and she was permitted to read her protest, which was similar, both in language and in argument, to the bishop's own protest.

Recalls Reports She Made.

Senator Nye recalled the reports of contributions and expenditures which Miss Burroughs as treasurer of the anti-Smith committee in Virginia had made to the clerk of the house and the secretary of the senate in September and October, 1928. Then he mentioned the last one on Jan. 2, 1929. According to law that final report, due on the first of the year, must review and present a complete accounting.

Chairman Nye then set forth the following facts:

That, though the Jan. 2 report was the last one which legally could be made, on Feb. 15, 1929, a further report was filed revealing additional expenditures above and beyond those shown in the final report of Jan. 2; that additional receipts of $19,998 and additional expenditures of some $19,000 were shown on this report; that while the Jan. 2 report showed loans unpaid of only $7,004, the Feb. 15 report showed a payment of unpaid obligations to Bishop Cannon of $17,364.

No Notations Made.

Chairman Nye wished to know why no notations of amounts owing Bishop Cannon had appeared in the Jan. 2 report; what was the occasion of the February report; whether the witness had handled any money contributed by Jameson to the anti-Smith committee, and on what date a receipt was given to Bishop Cannon for funds given to him by Jameson.

Miss Burroughs refused to answer.

Senator Nye recited into the record that on Feb. 11 the Jameson donation of $17,000 was receipted for, Bishop Cannon having given a check on his personal account in that amount, and that on the same day the committee gave him back the check for $17,364 for the sums allegedly due him.

The senator listed the amounts given by Jameson, which finally totaled $65,200, and declared, "Not one penny of these amounts is included in the Jan. 2 report."

"Have you any knowledge of any diversion of the Jameson money for any one's personal benefit by Bishop Cannon?" Senator Nye went on.

"I decline to answer."

"Are you conversant with the possible consequences of your refusal to testify?" demanded Senator Nye.

She was, Miss Burroughs admitted.

"You know that there is a law providing for the prosecution of witnesses who refuse to testify?" Senator Dill put in. "We don't want you to have any illusions. You understand that a prosecution might follow?"

JUDGES REAPPOINT HARRY A. PARKIN AS BANKRUPTCY REFEREE

Harry A. Parkin, referee in bankruptcy, yesterday was reappointed for his fifth term of two years by Federal Judges Carpenter, Wilkerson, Woodward, and Barnes. Referee Parkin, who has held that office since 1922, said that a decrease in bankruptcy frauds had been shown in Chicago in the last year or so because of the drastic prosecution in the federal courts and the present policy of questioning all bankrupts under oath during the adjudication. Referee Garfield Charles recently was reappointed for his third term.

BUTLER WORRIES DIPLOMATS WITH ANOTHER SPEECH

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—The state department disposed today of the second recent international diplomatic incident involving Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler and decided to ignore what appeared to offer potentialities of a third incident.

Secretary Stimson announced a formal explanation submitted by Minister Bellegarde of Haiti in response to a request by the state department regarding remarks he was quoted as making about the marine officer in a copyrighted interview with the Washington Herald had satisfactorily closed the incident.

The minister explained in his note that he had not endeavored to cast reflections on the marine officer.

A speech last night in Philadelphia in which Butler said he had seen the late President Huerta of Mexico "drunk" attracted widespread interest in both diplomatic and official circles.

Since the references to Huerta were mainly of a personal character directed against a dead man, state department officials decided they should be ignored.

HELD AS SLAYER OF SON.

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered that Alex Chuchla, 45 years old, 1901 East 91st street, be held to the grand jury on a charge of killing his 2 year old son, Walter. He shot the child and his wife three weeks ago after accusing his wife of infidelity. Mrs. Chuchla has recovered.

BRIAND GUARDED BY GUNS AS MOB THREATENS HIM

Student Rioters Cry 'Death to Foreign Chief!'

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 7.—Fears that an assassin's gun may foil the campaign of Foreign Minister Briand for the presidency, has led police to put a heavy guard around the veteran cabinet officer, following an attempt by royalists this afternoon to storm the chamber of deputies.

The demonstration, which threw police and deputies into a panic, came just as M. Briand was leaving the government bench after listening to the beginning of interpellations on the proposed Austro-German customs union. A mob of several hundred royalist students had marched from the Boulevard St. Michel in the students' quarter, but their ranks were broken up by a small force of gendarmes who tried to stop them half way.

Cry "Death to Briand!"

A half dozen eluded the police and entered the chamber. They gave a signal at the moment Briand was leaving the bench. As the foreign minister stepped out of the rear entrance of the building, he saw a mob of at least 200 youths battling with the police in the courtyard. "Death to Briand! Death to Briand!" roared the students as they caught sight of the old man. Then they surged forward as if to mob him.

Briand stepped into a waiting car and was whisked out of danger while the police and chamber guards rounded up the students.

The gendarmes struggled to keep the fighting prisoners from demolishing the interior of the police station. Police telephoned the ministry of the interior for instructions as to what should be done with the rioters.

Briand Evades Bodyguards.

Foreign Minister Briand, who has received letters threatening his life, has been closely guarded for some time on orders of the minister of the interior, but he dislikes surveillance and usually evades his bodyguard. From now on the police are determined to disregard his wishes and, in addition, are placing a heavy guard around the Quai D'Orsay. They have assigned two Sureté Generale detectives to escort him wherever he goes.

The bitterness of the Nationalist minority against Briand is growing as his presidential chances increase. Francois Coty, the Corsican perfumer and publisher, has decided to attack the foreign chief in his papers. He has plastered the country with flaming posters accusing the wily cabinet veteran of incompetence, graft, and criminal neglect and demanding he be impeached. The royalist Action Francaise goes this one better by running "The Firing Squad for Briand" at the top of the front page daily.

Other Nationalist papers are hardly less bitter and the police fear some unbalanced zealot will take a shot at Briand between now and election day, Wednesday, May 13.

His Election Is Predicted.

An assassin's bullet is now conceded by politicians to be about the only thing that can stop Briand's triumphal march to the Elysee palace. It is learned that all the left wing politicians, except the communists, will present a petition on Saturday asking Briand to become a candidate, and he has already intimated to his friends that he is willing. Paul Doumer, president of the senate, tonight became the first official presidential candidate. Albert Le Brun, Leon Berard, and War Minister Andre Maginot are mentioned as possible rivals.

It is expected that after his speech in the chamber tomorrow Briand will be an overwhelming favorite to succeed President Doumergue, something unheard of in French elections.

HARRY MERRICK INDICTED ON TAX CHARGES IN WEST

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—[Special.]—Harry H. Merrick, formerly prominent in industrial and financial affairs in Chicago and now head of real estate and insurance corporations in Los Angeles, was indicted by the federal grand jury today. Merrick is accused of failing to make proper returns to the goverament on his 1918 income. Merrick, who formerly was president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, denied the charge and said he would surrender to the United States marshal and post $5,000 bail tomorrow.

FLAGS, CHEERS GREET TROOPS AT MINE TOWN

Guardsmen Take Charge in Kentucky Field.

Evarts, Ky., May 7.—(AP)—Waving American flags and cheering loudly, several hundred residents of the strife-torn Evarts coal mining community greeted 325 National Guardsmen as they detrained here this afternoon, bearing orders to "protect those who behave themselves and take charge of those who do not."

The guardsmen, dispatched by Gov. Flem D. Sampson after a series of outbreaks during the last few months had brought death to five men and large property damages, came from Harlan, where they mobilized this morning.

While the troops were alighting from their special train Col. Dan M. Carrell, in command, addressed an assembly of residents and union miners in the little schoolhouse which had been closed because of the disorders.

Will Report to Governor.

He also told newspaper men he had spent a part of the morning conferring in Harlan with union officials, mine operators, and county officers in an effort to find a permanent solution to the economic situation and labor disagreements that have resulted in hundreds of unemployed miners in the county. He said he would report direct to Gov. Sampson on the results of his conferences.

Addressing the meeting in the school house, Col. Carrell said: "

"We are here solely for the protection of the community, with an impartial and unbiased attitude, to preserve peace and safety." He was introduced by Dr. S. E. Crouch, a local physician, and then W. M. Hightower, president of the local United Mine Workers, asked all who would coöperate with the soldiers to hold up their hands. Hands went up throughout the hall to the accompaniment of a rousing cheer. Union leaders are to meet again tomorrow to discuss the situation.

Mine Guards Stay On.

The mines lie two and three miles away from Evarts and no immediate plans were made for the soldiers to replace the mine guards. The latter remained on duty.

ROBBERS BREAK INTO TOMB IN HUNT FOR LOOT

Robbers broke into a private mausoleum in Mount Olivet cemetery at Joliet yesterday. The tomb was built several years ago for Lawrence J. Crowley, one time wealthy Joliet bootlegger, who had ordered it for his parents. It contained six vaults.

What, if anything, the robbers took could not be learned yesterday. Crowley could not be found. The police surmised that the robbers had supposed that Crowley kept his securities and valuables in the three unoccupied vaults, each of which was opened by the thieves. The other three, containing the bodies of Crowley's parents and his father-in-law, had not been disturbed.

A BITTER PILL ON THE PALATE STILLS HUNGER

Scientist Offers Help to Reducers.

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Hunger pangs can be staved off without swallowing a morsel of food; merely by taking a bitter taste in the mouth. A sweet taste is the most effective aid to digestion.

These and other scientific effects of mere flavor on digestion were reported to the home making center here today by Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the psychological laboratory of Colgate university.

Sweet, sour, salt and bitter, the four elementary tastes, were produced in the mouths of young men at Colgate without any of the taste substance entering the stomach. They affected stomach contractions, flow of saliva, gastric digestion, and even breathing.

"Not all," said Dr. Laird, "affected these digestive processes to the same extent and in the same direction. Sweet and salt in general produced the most favorable results.

"All elementary tastes stop the hunger contractions of the empty stomach as soon as they are placed in the mouth. This inhibition lasts as long as tastes remain, but bitter and sour can inhibit these normal contractions for as long as a quarter of an hour.

Sweets during the meal or fairly soon afterward boost the gastric secretion greatly; salt raises it less, and bitter seems to be without effect."

Sweet deepens breathing apparently, while "attention is given primarily to enjoying the taste." Sour causes shallower, restrained breathing, "as though the subject were drawing himself into a ball, an effect persisting a full minute after the taste solution is withdrawn from the mouth."

Salt gives marked distortion in breathing, "approaching gasping for air." Bitter taste is followed in about half a minute after removal of the substance by a breath that resembles a sigh.

Balked by Safe, Robbers Take $3,000 in Clothing

Unable to open the safe in Bart's clothing store at 633 West North avenue last night, two robbers bound Adam Schneider, 2103 Byron street, the manager, and carried away 120 suits and eleven topcoats valued at $3,000.

The Shortest Line to the East

HALSTED STREET IS A PROTOTYPE OF AVERAGE MAN

Reaches Neither Heights Nor Depths.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

To comprehend the real Chicago and its basic communities which lie apart from the lake and the loop, one should travel the full length of Halsted street, which is known as the longest street in the world.

After many hours, perhaps days, of tramping or riding along this famous street, observing a cross section of the city's life, it begins to take on almost a personal identity.

Like the average man it reaches neither the heights nor depths of things, although it has a point or two when it soars and flashes, another where it sinks into discouraged, weary vice and sin. On the whole it is a street of labor. It clings to the middle way, avoiding the pitfalls of uptown Babylon, looking on the loop from afar. It is a street that represents American grandeur to many a poor immigrant who lives in its welter of races. It furnishes the life blood of big industry. It gets a poor return, but in the end it reaches dignity and peace and fields of heavenly green.

Stores and Dwellings.

Halsted street is born in an old, thickly settled, respectable neighborhood at the edge of Uptown Chicago. Here it is a long, drab street of low outlines, something like Commercial road in London. It skirts the smart districts but goes on its modest two story way of little stores and dwellings for many blocks. There are the old German homes of Northtown and Lincoln, neat homes with flower pots and lace curtains and windows close to the sidewalk. It is as distinct from Broadway as a flapper is from a German housewife.

At the five corners of Lincoln, Fullerton, and Halsted there are signs of ambition, and the street is dignified by the red brick remoteness and green lawn coolness of the Presbyterian Theological seminary and the Virginia library. But in another block the plain little homes and stores begin again, centering in the old neighborhood of Clybourn avenue and the Prudential Savings bank landmark.

After this comes the near west side industrial district, with factories, bridges, viaducts, gas tanks, lumber yards cluttering the landscape to the river. The few houses that remain are old and sagging. The towers of the loop shine through the fog.

Becomes Italian Community.

Over the river, at the intersection of Milwaukee and Grand avenues, the street changes again. The street becomes Italian in character, colorful and untidy. Statues of Christ and the Virgin mother appear in store windows. Imported food shops and tenements.

A touch of the country is found at Randolph street, where the street passes the market. Wagons and stores display trees, shrubs, and flowers.

The Madison street corner has seen only one important change in thirty years. That was the passing of the gaudy old saloons that used to decorate the street here. The district still retains its old flavor. Two story, false front wooden stores hide speakeasies and gambling clubs. Shady hotels. Greek coffee shops, a burlesque show with pictures of nude women flaunted on the street, show that the street has refused to reform except outwardly. Hoboes and casual laborers from all over the county know this part of the street as their winter resort. They loiter in front of the employment offices and sit in the windows of the stag hotels.

Hull House Is Landmark.

Halsted street takes up its long southern journey here, cutting through the Greek colony at Blue Island and Harrison street. Two efforts at widening and brightening the street near here have failed. Tottering structures of the vintage of 1880 still dominate the street.

The first southern landmark is Hull house, the old rambling brick structure that stands as an oasis in the slums, a green garden in a desert, a mother to the poor of many generations. A glimpse into its inner patio shows a patch of green lawn, the first in miles. It has open doors for all, clubs and reading rooms, guidance and help.

Italian and Mexican shops are mixed in with the Greek stores in this neighborhood, and at 12th street, the first important south side center, the old Jewish ghetto begins. Here is a bright spot on the street, a bank of size, the West Side Trust and Savings bank, the big 12th Street Department store, crowded with people hunting bargains, restaurants boasting awnings that stretch from door to curb, making a specialty of banquets for weddings, streets gay with shops for the bride, a district of keen competition and salesmanship.

The Jewish Courier has an office along here, and nearby is the Maxwell street market, one of the most picturesque streets in the world, comparable with the famous Petticoat lane of London. Here the stores are on the sidewalks and the merchants reach out to grab their customers and thrust wares upon them. Fish and furs, suits and hardware, are all mixed up in the barrows. The store of L. Klein dominates the street here.

On Into Yards District.

Over railroad viaducts, past warehouses, the street goes on toward another center at Canalport, where the big store of Klein Brothers looms up. There are many Czecho-Slovakian names along here and a Lithuanian mission. At 22d street another factory district is entered, the territory of the Omaha Packing company and the river, which is a pool of industry.

At 26th street the first tree and patch of grass is seen at the edge of an old quarry and dump, where nature is trying to cover the carelessness and neglect of man. There is a municipal playground near here and rows of two story workingmen's homes. At 31st street there is a little loop, with a carnival in progress. At 33d street there is a bank and a department store. The side streets, which nearer town are unsightly and wretchedly paved, begin to radiate out into rows of neatness. Thirty-sixth street is another bright corner, with a theater.

And now Halsted street becomes parts of the great "Yards" district. It skirts the entire length of the stockyards for ten blocks. The towers and long, high runways, the Stockyards National bank, Swift & Co., the Drovers' Journal, the ornamental gateway, deserted old whisky row, which formerly flamed with red liquor and fighting.

It is not until 50th street is reached that the street returns to normalcy. The stores are of more substantial character, the side streets giving glimpses of better homes and good looking apartment buildings. At 55th street a grateful stop is made at Garfield boulevard, the only street of beauty that is found in all the long journey from the north. Here is a green parkway, wide and lined with elms.

The Prosperity Section.

From here on until 63d street the old thoroughfare takes on a more imposing and prosperous appearance. The buildings are of three or four stories, substantially built, and with a better class of stores. It is at this point that Halsted street soars to the greatest dream of wealth and gayety. It is as if all the drably earned wealth for miles had flowered here.

It is a "little loop" of department stores, hotels, theaters, gay little shops, and crowded streets. The elevated station is located here and the space is so valuable along the front for a block that the stores are narrow, with deep arcade windows. Sears' May festival is on. The new Wieboldt store in cream stone is around the corner. There is a burlesque show on Halsted street and three other theaters around the corner. The steel skeleton of a new tower shows on 63d street. Kresge has a gay corner. The Chicago City Bank and Trust company has a new style structure in bulk stone. There are many specialty shops, showing a high powered trading center, and the Professional Arts building is another evidence of this.

From here south to 79th street, where there is another trading center, with Schubert's department store and banks, the old street remains consistently good, but a few blocks south of 79th it decides to go in for a rural old age. Here the first cottages, with yards and flowering trees, are seen, and soon after, at 85th street, the street cars definitely desert Halsted street and turn west to go to the southern limits by another route. Halsted street is vastly improved by this desertion. It becomes a wide and pleasant boulevard, with a parkway in the middle. At 87th street it passes a wider area of green, almost like a meadow, and so it runs on into the open country and becomes the Harvey road. It has lived a long, hard, and useful life and deserves peace.

2,000 Voices to Be Heard in Choruses in Loop.

Some of the participating choirs are among the oldest in Chicago and one of them—the Umbrian Glee club—is, next to the famous Amphion of Washington, D. C., the oldest colored musical organization in the United States.

All the societies contributing to this colossal lullaby of the loop will keep moving until all have been heard at each of the fifteen stations.

Banks, railway companies, mercantile houses, church organizations, groups of foreign born citizens, clubs of advertising men and community organizations will be represented by their choral societies.

Backed by Business Houses.

The number and size of the singing societies, which bear the names of great concerns and were long ago organized under the auspices of those firms, will astonish you because they will give you vivid proof that art and commerce are not such strangers as those American critics, who rail at the tired business man, would have you believe.

You will hear the Marshall Field chorus of 150 members, Edgar Wilson director.

You will hear the First National Bank Choral club of 85 members, G. F. Richards director, and it announces as its leading numbers for Friday night, "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise"—and how!—"The Bells of St. Mary's," and Nevins' "When the Flag Goes By."

A Prize Winning Chorus.

You will hear the Illinois Central's male chorus, which was the prize winning male chorus in last August's Chicagoland Music festival.

Their principal numbers will be "Rolling Down to Rio," "The Sleigh" and Mannder's "To Arms," the rendition of which won the Illinois Central the festival prize.

And Armour & Co. will send the Armour Jubilee singers, a colored organization, which will be heard in "You Can Tell the World About This," "Go Down, Moses," and "I Got Shoes," under the direction of Cornelius Pierce.

The Byzantine choir, which includes the best musical talent of Chicago's Greek community, will offer a unique program of strange and haunting melodies under the direction of Nicholas Matsoukas.

Legion Group to Sing.

Advertising Men's Legion post, No. 38, popular on the radio, will now come in person before the town under the direction of William Pohlman, and Frank Bennett will lead the Allerton Glee club of the Allerton house.

"Roses of Picardy" will be one of the numbers in the program of the Illinois Club of Catholic Women under the direction of Arthur Becker, dean of music at Loyola university, and another organization of women in "The Night of the Choral Cavalcade" will be the Cook County Council Glee club of the American Legion auxiliary.

The colored choral societies have come forward superbly, as they always do when they receive an invitation, to sing their hearts out and their heads off.

To Foster Good Will.

And their efforts on these public occasions are important because they do more by their talent and their good will to create kindly feeling between Caucasians and Negroes than does any other kind of propaganda that has that end in view. It was so at the Chicagoland Music festival and it will be so—and on a larger scale—next Friday night.

Among the Negro choral societies already scheduled for appearance are the Mundy choristers, numbering one hundred; the National Jubilee chorus, George Garner director; the Metropolitan church chorus, J. Wesley Jones, director; the Pilgrim choir, Edward Boatner director; the Federal Glee club, composed of postal employés; the Tinsley Harmonic society, Myrtle Tyree director; the T. P. Bryant Choral club; the Dett Male Glee club, E. Simpson director, and the Olivet church choir, William Henry Smith director.

WOMEN RUSH TO GET PLACES AT JUBILEE LUNCHEON ON MAY 18

From Association of Commerce headquarters it was reported yesterday that the rush for table reservations for the woman's day luncheon of the Chicago Jubilee, which will take place at the Hotel Sherman on May 18, already has brought checks for more than 600 places, and that rivalry is growing among the organizations for the largest representation. Tickets reserved only on receipt of the money.

The Illinois Women's Athletic club has turned in the money for ten tables for its members. The Women's Catholic Order of Foresters is next, with six tables. Each table seats ten women. The Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations, whose president, Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, is general chairman of the program, has reserved four tables. Several other groups have ordered two tables each and have indicated that more will be required.

Letters of acceptance were received yesterday from Judge Mary Bartelme, Dr. Maude Slye, and Miss Pauline Palmer, to whom invitations were sent. They will represent, respectively, Chicago women in the law, research, and painting.

Varied Programs Scheduled.

All those groups will give varied programs, but they will be especially generous with the lovely spirituals which they sing incomparably because they infuse them with the depth and tenderness of feeling which create authentic poetry.

WOMAN SEIZES PURSE SNATCHER.

William Davis, 15 years old, 2014 Washington boulevard, was seized yesterday by Miss Sally Strand, 5210 Kenmore avenue, and turned over to police, after he allegedly had snatched her purse from a table in a beauty shop in the Mallers building.

ANNOUNCE ORDER OF MARCH FOR JUBILEE PARADE

Monday Procession to Be in Three Sections.

Final plans for the grand parade to be held next Monday night as the inaugural event of the Chicago Jubilee were announced yesterday by Frederick J. Ashley, chairman of the coördinating committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce in charge of the celebration.

ROBERT NAU.

The parade will be divided into three general sections. It will start at Michigan avenue and Superior street, proceed southward past the reviewing stand in Michigan avenue between 7th and 8th streets, and continue to 26th street, a distance of approximately three and one-half miles. The arrangements as provided by Robert H. Nau, chairman of the parade, follow:

Marchers in Second Section.

Second section—Special marching units with bands, fife and drum corps, police unit, fire department unit, and fire insurance patrol.

Third section—American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other veterans' groups; bands, and fife and drum corps; also decorated floats, of which there will be more than 100.

The parade will be the feature of Monday night, and will be followed by other major nightly events. On Tuesday night will be held the American-French International Golden Gloves tournament. The visiting contestants are now in Chicago, eager to participate in the Jubilee.

On Wednesday night State street will be turned into a huge amusement lane, colorfully illuminated. Leon Mandel II., chairman of the carnival committee of the State Street council which is sponsoring this feature, announced yesterday that the Commonwealth Edison company's engineers have designed a special scheme of lighting to add to the glamour of the festival. State street will be tinted with golds, reds, blues and other colors, Mr. Mandel said.

Merchants Group to Join.

The carnival will extend in effect beyond the south boundary of Van Buren street. The South State Street Improvement association, comprising 147 stores from Van Buren street to Polk street, will also join in the celebration, Leo Heller, secretary, announced.

In the program for the State Street carnival, final allocation of the various orchestras and other groups participating was made yesterday. Six dance orchestras were placed. Their positions were drawn in Mr. Mandel's office by Miss Anna May Wong, screen and stage star. Radio station assignments were likewise drawn. Jan Garmber and his orchestra were assigned to Jackson street as were the stars from W-G-N. THE TRIBUNE radio station. Ben Bernie and his orchestra drew Randolph street. Other bands and their locations are: Wayne King, Washington street; Art Kassel, Madison street; Herbie Kay, Monroe street, and Dan Russo, Adams street.

JUBILEE NOTES

News of the Chicago Jubilee is being spread through the central states, and even to the coasts, by representatives of the city's large concerns. One pioneer wholesale house is concentrating on territory within a 200 mile radius of Chicago, its salesmen bringing the Jubilee to the attention of their clients.

A Jubilee carnival will be held on the near north side next Friday, May 15, by the North Central association, of which W. C. Calvert is executive secretary. The celebration will be held in Ohio street between Michigan avenue and St. Clair street, beginning at 7:30 p. m. The West 22d Street and Kedzie Avenue Business Men's associations will also join in the Jubilee in the form of street and store decorating, according to Joseph J. Salat, president of the Lawndale State bank.

W. J. Leahy, assistant passenger traffic manager of the Rock Island lines, returned to his office yesterday from a trip through Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. He reported much interest in these states in the Chicago Jubilee, and said many visitors will attend. Th Rock Island has established a fare an'l one third round trip excursion for the festival.

Committees which will judge floats and decorated buildings for prizes have been named. Judges for the loop building award are John L. Spellman, Hal Lytle, and George M. Tobey. Judges for the outlying building plaque are William A. Dudley, Frank J. Bilek, Paul J. Johnson, L. D. Jones, and Frank Tomczyk. The float judges are Bois Anisfeld, John Norton, and R. J. Thain.

Police Commissioner Alcock last night warned against fake solicitors using the Jubilee to enrich themselves. There are no authorized solicitors for funds.

Bandit Starts Life Term for $3 Robbery with Gun

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 7.—(AP)—Charles Stanley, alias Bruce Scott, 23, wanted in Indiana in connection with several crimes, began serving a sentence of life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at McAlester today for a $3 robbery with firearms. The prisoner was convicted of robbing the family of T. L. Pair of Edmond, Okla., in March. Stanley, or Scott, as he was known in Indiana, was wanted at Indianapolis for mortally wounding Henry Millikan, a fireman. Scott also has been sought as the man who robbed a bank at Jonesville, near Columbus, Ind.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel your end coming and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. You should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They are wonderful, harmless, gentle regulators. Insist on Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

HOUSE OF LORDS REJECTS LABOR'S LAND USE BILL

"Peers Versus the People" Crisis Nearer.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 7.—The house of lords tonight continued its defiance of the house of commons and brought the battle on the issue of the "peers versus the people" nearer a climax by rejecting completely part one of the Labor government's land utilization bill. The vote was 52 to 31. The bill seeks to establish an agricultural land corporation and authorizes experiments in farming on a large scale.

All that is left of the bill is the scheme to permit the government to acquire additional small land holdings, and even this section was badly mutilated by the house of lords in the committee stage. The bill had already passed all readings in the house of commons.

Tory Leader Attacks Bill.

The third reading of the bill in the house of lords will be held within a few days and then returned to commons for reconsideration.

Today's attack on the measure was led by Lord Hailsham, Conservative leader of the house of lords, who disclaimed any desire to challenge the desired will of the people.

"But to say that the house of lords would accept any measure squeezed through the house of commons by disreputable bargaining and gerrymandering is another matter," he said.

Lord Parmoor, Labor spokesman, asserted that the government's answer to Lord Hailsham's demand that the house of commons should waive its privileges on questions of finance was a final "no."

Means Death of Scheme.

He characterized the demand as a challenge to the rights and privileges of the house of commons, although Lord Hailsham indignantly disclaimed such an interpretation of his request.

Tonight's action, it is anticipated, will mean the death of the entire bill, for it can only become a law by the parliament act, under which it could be passed over the lords' veto in two years. But the defiance of the house of lords makes it a practical certainty that "peers versus the people" will be made the leading issue at the general elections.

ARRANGE TO PUT FOKKER PLANES AGAIN IN SERVICE

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—A program was agreed upon today by Anthony H. G. Fokker, commerce department officials, and air transport operators, to put a series of Fokker F-10 and F-10-A planes, temporarily restricted from passenger carrying, into full service.

Certain reconditioning and maintenance items, which concern the wings, are involved in the program, together with a modification of the Aileron design.

Reveal Britain Losing Rich Trade Market in Far East

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 7.—Great Britain is rapidly losing her valuable trade markets in the far east, particularly China. High prices, obsolete publicity, and antiquated sales methods are the main reasons, according to the British economic mission, which was sent to the far east to investigate trade conditions and whose report was issued tonight.

The mission issues a grave warning, emphasizing the need for lower production costs and a drastic reorganization of British trade and industry. The report concludes:

"Should the decline in our export trade continue much longer at its present alarming rate the results must soon become evident in bankruptcy and disaster at home. If that occurs the consequences must be the abandonment of our great trading stations overseas."

Suggest Exhibition Ship.

The report is signed by leading employers of the woolen and engineering trades and the cooperative and trade union representatives, which composed the mission, under the chairmanship of Sir Ernest Thompson. The proposals insist that production and other costs must be reduced until British goods reach a level to compete with those from the United States, Germany, and Japan.

The mission suggested that Great Britain should send an exhibition ship to the far east to act as a mobile shop window for British products.

Sir Ernest Thompson also hints that Great Britain should follow the lead of America, which has devoted a part of its Boxer indemnity fund to educate young Chinese in American technical colleges, as well as supplying text books for the colleges of China.

CHIANG RUSHES TROOPS

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, May 7.—While the Nationalist government is utilizing all possible political means to placate the Cantonese who are heading the southern revolt, President Chiang Kai-shek took no chances today and ordered the second division, consisting of 50,000 troops, to Hunan province. In addition, Gen. Ho Ying-chin, now in Nanking, has been ordered to return to rebel infested Kiangsi province, where the government already ha smore than 100,000 troops.

President Chiang has also commandeered 20 Chinese ships at Shanghai and ordered them to Nanking for transport purposes, but it is not known whether he intends to send troops directly to Canton or to Yangtze river ports.

Fear Alliance with Reds.

The government exhibits little outward anxiety over the southern revolt situation, but an undercurrent of apprehension exists over the possibility that the Canton movement might turn into an alliance with communist forces, similar to the situation in 1926 and 1927, when a communist government was set up at Hankow.

Gen. Chiang's heavy concentration of troops in the provinces south of the Yangtze is for the purpose of heading off such a movement. Canton, it is learned, is rushing active war preparations. Recruiting squads are forcing thousands of laborers into the rebel army. Gen. Chen Chi-tang is using forceful methods to obtain war funds and has commandeered railway revenues and reimposed likin taxes. As a result of this the Canton Chamber of Commerce has moved its headquarters to the foreign concession district.

Wang Ching-wei, Leftist leader, who has been taking refuge at Hongkong, has been invited to go to Canton and join the rebel government there. He has been promised a free hand to spread propaganda against the Nanking government.

POLICE IN LOOP HALT SALE OF APPLES BY VETS

Policemen of the Central station yesterday went through the loop district to halt the sales of apples by war veterans, acting on the instructions of Capt. John Horan. The special permits by which the veterans established their stands on the streets expired on April 30 and have not been renewed.

"We are giving them time to clean up their stocks," said Capt. Horan, "but by the time of the Jubilee they will all be gone. Most of them have obtained bonus loans and are not in desperate need now."

CALMLY ADMITS KILLING WIFE, 3 CHILDREN BY FIRE

Greeley, Colo., May. 7.—[Special.]—James V. Foster, forty-eight, confessed today the murder by fire of his wife and three daughters.

Foster admitted in a confession he dictated and then signed that he drenched his sleeping family with gasoline Tuesday morning and then set them afire.

Calmly and without evidence of emotional stress or remorse Foster, who has denied until today his guilt, despite deathbed accusations of his wife and oldest daughter, Mildred, eleven, told how he had plotted the crime for more than a month.

"Devil Working in Him."

It was the devil working in me," Foster said. After he had signed his confession he was returned to his cell. Then his nerve failed him and for the first time he alternately cried and prayed.

"A month ago this came into my mind," Foster said. "I first thought I would smother the children and give my wife muriatic acid and make it look like she killed them and then committed suicide.

"I took gasoline and threw it on the children and my wife. Then I made a trail of it out to the kichen. I struck a match and dropped it in front of my wife and the whole room burst into flames."

Wife's Pleas in Vain.

"My wife woke up and Mildred ran over, her pajamas burning. My wife said: 'My God, Mildred, he's going to kill us all.'

"When I got up I asked God to take the devil out of my mind. But the devil had hold of me. It was the devil's work.

"I ran out of the house and climbed in my automobile and drove to Ault."

Four charges of murder were filed against Foster in District court here today. Authorities said Foster had insurance on each member of the family.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 7.—The German deficit at the end of the financial year 1930-'31 was $297,000,000. The ministry of finance revealed this in a budget statement published today. The statement also showed that the floating debt had swollen at the end of the year to $400,000,000.

NORWAY CABINET FORCED TO QUIT OVER TRADE ROW

OSLO, Norway, May 7.—(AP)—The Norwegian government resigned today after parliament approved by a vote of 57 to 55 a resolution deploring the granting of the so-called Lilleborg concession. The concession, a complicated commercial transaction, was granted a year ago by the government. It aroused strong feeling.

Under its terms the De No Fa company, which owns the northern factories of Fredrikstad and half of the capital of which is held by the British Unilever Bracket company, was permitted to acquire half the capital of the Lilleborg company, a soap manufacturing concern.

Premier Mowinckel said the resignation of the government was not voluntary, but was forced.

SENTENCED FOR HOLDUP.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—Allen Smith, 25, Eau Claire, today was sentenced to from one to four years in Green Bay reformatory by Judge James Wickham in Circuit court here for the attempted holdup of the River inn near here July 12.

INNOCENT SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

One member of the board of education, discussing Mayor Cermak's request for resignations, said that it had been public policy for years for the mayor to keep his hands off school affairs. Another said that he never before heard a mayor so openly and brazenly announce his purpose of getting control of the board. These contributions to public thought remained anonymous in the news reports, violets on a mossy bank. The trustees apparently never heard of William McAndrew and the trial of King George which brought libel suits and crow eating to the responsible comedians; of Supt. Bogan's refusal to permit the school children to be made political messengers for the circulation of city hall hocum; of the publication and circulation during the late mayoralty campaign of matter for political effect by the board, or of any of the various incidents which made the school system notorious.

Evidently the protective device of the board of education has been to sleep it off.

THE NEW CRISIS IN CHINA.

The interviews with American representatives of business and finance in Peiping procured and summarized by Charles Dailey, THE TRIBUNE correspondent at the former Chinese capital, indicate the difficulties which a policy of American aid for China encounters. "Most of these American business men," Mr. Dailey reports, "are of the opinion that matters will become worse before there can be any improvement, and that American financial and other aid had best await developments toward a stable government before taking any further risk."

We regret that the most recent news from China seems to support this conclusion. On the eve of the Nationalist party convention, Canton and its adjoining provinces, the home and citadel of nationalism, indulge in a factional revolution, throw out the government affiliated with the Nanking authorities and declare their distrust of the convention and their opposition to the leaders now in control of the Nationalist government. This gives emphasis to the report of a serious schism in the inner household of the party management, otherwise indicated by the report that Sun Fo, minister of railways, the only son of Sun Yat-sen, is sulking in his tent, so to speak, and will refuse to give the convention his countenance. Other figures in the Nationalist party also are known to be seriously disaffected and inclined to charge the present generalissimo, Chiang Kai-shek, and his brother-in-law, T. V. Soong, minister of finance, with a plot to pack the convention and entrench themselves in power.

President Chiang belittles the Canton revolt and says he does not intend to send troops to restore the expelled government, but suggests that he may do so later.

The most optimistic view can hardly be very hopeful. The Nationalist government has had to encounter the armed attack of non-Nationalist leaders in the northern provinces and was only able to defeat them by the intervention of the Manchurian tuchen, Chang Hsueh-liang. Its most formidable military enemy, the so-called Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, has still a well disciplined army at his command, though he could not act effectively alone. But the Nanking government's army has not yet been able to suppress the serious guerrilla warfare and banditry in the central provinces and it would seem can hardly afford to draw off any great number of its divisions from that pressing service to recover Canton. So far as revenue and actual administrative control are concerned the Nanking government commands the resources of only a few provinces, though the most important, except the Cantonese, south and Manchuria. The prospect, therefore, that the coming convention will solidify or extend its power is not as brigh as it was hoped it would be.

The situation is deplorable. The overshadowing need of China is peace and stability. Every other consideration must be secondary. But political and personal ambitions among the many leaders of the modern movement create weakness within the only organization that seems to offer the most hope of stabilization and progress. Charges against President Chiang and his allies of graft and conspiracy to gain unlimited power are serious, but they must be weighed against the paramount need of China for peace, at least in the pragmatic American mind. Even a corrupt and tyrannical government, if it is strong enough to bring and keep peace, would be preferable to an indefinite continuance of disorder and futile faction. We are not implying that the charges are true, having no knowledge of the facts, but, even if true, they do not dispose of the need for some sort of strong government. If the present officials are expelled there seems small reason to hope they will be replaced by men who are immune to the same sort of attack as destroyed their predecessors or better able to impose peace.

Pending another critical trial of strength, it is clear aid to China is so hazardous as to be perhaps beyond consideration. Yet, paradoxically, it may be most needed at this stage. That we are well enough informed or possessed of enough foresight to assist the present ruling faction to strengthen its control is more than doubtful, and the danger of backing the wrong horse, both from the viewpoint of China's welfare and our own interest, is probably too great at this moment to be hazarded.

THE ILLINOIS INCOME TAX.

The income tax has a sound theory to be considered when the Illinois legislature is prepared to approach it fairly. That cannot be done when it is entirely at the urgence of organized downstate agriculture backed by a squirearchy trying for another means of exploiting a partly disfranchised city. The first step to such a new scheme of taxation is a restoration of equitable representation. When franchise rights have been restored then the income tax may be considered fairly. Until then taxation is without representation.

A great deal of Illinois taxation, as similar taxation elsewhere, is upon means of making a living with the assumption that possession of the means insures the living. That assumption is subject to all the accidents which can befall humanity. Taxation which descends upon the tools regardless of the profit from their use may go in the direction of great injustice and frequently achieves it. Ability to pay is the accepted basis of taxation, not benefits received. The question of benefit is seldom asked. It is in the background of large taxes. Ability to pay presupposes benefits received from the aggregations of people, but that is an intangible in the theory. The tax levy seeks tangible wealth. The inequity is in the fact that discoverable wealth means so many different things, whereas income is so much more a fixed factor. One man may be ruined by the levy on his possessions; another may have an income unrelated to his taxable wealth.

Taxation of the means of livelihood without consideration of the revenue produced has injustice bound up in it. A man taxed upon the value of his investments may have his living taken from him. He can stand a tax upon the income derived from these securities. To save himself he conceals possession of the securities, and the law, knowing its injustice, does not search him out. Otherwise it might as well capitalize a man's job and tax the value of it, not the proceeds from it—and ruin him.

Correction of Illinois taxation, however, cannot be picked out of a legislative hopper into which special interest, in this present case rural, has tossed a bill. A new tax cannot be added to the present aberrations of the Illinois system without multiplying the injustices already contained in it. The proposed income tax is designed to throw another burden upon a city class already imposed upon and deprived of legislative rights. The bill is of bad purpose and wrong method.

POPPY DAY.

The city council has taken commendable action in fixing a single annual tag day for all veteran relief appeals. This will protect the public from irresponsible or grafting enterprises and permit the public to assist the deserving.

The new tag day will be called Poppy day, and May 22 is designated. The four chief veterans' organizations authorized to make the appeal are the American Legion, which will have 60 per cent of the proceeds; the Spanish-American War Veterans, which will have 20 per cent; the Veterans of Foreign Wars, 20 per cent, and the G. A. R., whose requirements are met by the other three organizations. These groups have formed a Veterans' Poppy Day association, which will have charge of the procedure.

Considerable opposition to this arrangement was encountered, and the council deserves the public's thanks for protecting it from exploitation and the cause of deserving veterans from the loss and discredit imposed by rackets.

THE VIOLENT ENGLISH.

Sir Oswald Mosley and his wife, Lady Cynthia, were given safe conduct by the police at Ashton-under-Lyne the other day from the town hall to their hotel. A Labor constituency had become noisy. The Mosleys were called traitors and dirty dogs until the police got them under cover. In a by-election the Laborites lost a member of parliament because the Mosleys, separatists from the Labor party, entered a third candidate, who got enough votes to let the Tory candidate in. Hence the rage and resentment.

English observers of their own affairs might note that it is never necessary in the United States in these days to give an important political personage a police escort to save him from a mob of infuriated voters. This is a picture of violence in a large way which would be extraordinary in American politics. An American political gathering, its English reputation to the contrary, is relied upon for good nature and orderly behavior. The riotous behavior of an English crowd wouldn't be understood here. It would be regarded as an outbreak of savagery. What violent, lawless people the English turn out to be!

LIFE AND PROPERTY IN PHILADELPHIA.

[The New York Times.]

Of Philadelphia it seems to be as true as of New York that respect for property is more strongly ingrained in the people than respect for human life. Commissioner Mulrooney's recent report on crime in New York in 1930 showed virtually no increase in burglary and robbery but an 18 per cent increase in homicide. Figures for Philadelphia issued by the Criminal Justice association indicate the same general trend.

For Philadelphia a comparison is made with the average figures for the twenty-five largest American cities. The national rate for robberies is 138 per 100,000 of the population, but in Philadelphia it is only 38. For burglaries it is, national, 306; against Philadelphia 188; and for automobile thefts it is 492, against Philadelphia 193. After this revelation of a Philadelphia from one and a half to three and a half times as law abiding as her sister cities, it is disappointing that in murders Philadelphia can do no better than 7.1 per 100,000 of the population, against a national average of 3.1.

The Wickersham commission has just reminded us how inadequate are all our crime statistics for the purpose of definite and nationwide conclusions. It may well be that the figures cited from Philadelphia are only approximations. Yet even thus the spread between the figures of crime against property and the homicide figures cannot be explained away. The exceptionally high murder rate in Philadelphia may be in part the concomitant of Philadelphia's recognized importance as a beer-running center; and the murders include gang casualties incurred in the course of struggle for control of the illicit traffic.

LONG LIFE AND BLOOD PRESSURE.

HIGH blood pressure is not conducive to longevity. This is the burden of reports from insurance companies, health officials, and private physicians. Let us say that everybody knows that, and the interest now is in learning what can be done about it.

Dr. D. Riesman tells us of one reason why high blood pressure is not conducive to longevity and shows us one thing to do about it. People who learn that they have high blood pressure develop a blood pressure complex. They become anxious, they worry, and sometimes they go into a funk lest their blood pressure get them. Nothing is more effective in raising blood pressure. High blood pressure causes fear and fear causes high blood pressure, and so the wheels go round.

The better side is this: The man who can train himself out of fear, who can teach himself not to worry, to take life as it comes, will do much to prevent high blood pressure from interfering with his longevity, whatever it may do to the other fellow's.

Dr. Riesman has another opinion of the same tenor. It is that unless a high blood pressure is associated with some organic disease the person who has it should be able so to live as that long life will be his lot.

To this Dr. Steiglitz adds another guide post of the same type. It is, if the blood pressure fluctuates a good deal there is a considerable chance that conditions can be brought on to a pretty satisfactory level.

The habits that Dr. Riesman emphasizes depend much more on the patient than on the doctor. One is to take an after-dinner nap. He likes the plan, so popular in many parts of the world, of locking the doors at 12 and not opening them until 2. Meanwhile, the wheels stop, everybody eats a leisurely lunch, and then takes a short snooze. He advocates less strenuosity in both work and play. Fewer big business deals, fewer holes of golf and less effort to beat bogey. He is against poker and bridge, races, prize fights, riots and political campaigns. As to eating, he is opposed to gorges and feeds. Quantity is more important than quality. He advises that meat be eaten once a day, but no alcoholic beverages, no condiments and no tobacco. If a man has any of these as a habit he should greatly limit his indulgence. He advocates a low salt diet, not a no salt diet. If a person is overweight he should eat sparingly of starches, sweets and fats.

FOODS THAT CREATE SUGAR.

G. G. N. writes:

1. Besides potatoes, what other foodstuffs create sugar in the blood?
2. Should one avoid all starchy foods to cut down the high sugar content?
3. Is a periodic canker sore in the mouth a symptom of stomach disorder?
4. Would nervous indigestion and acid stomach cause total alopecia?

REPLY.

1. Among the prominent ones are breads, pastries, desserts, sweets, cereals. Nearly every food can make some sugar. A certain percentage of lean meat is convertible into this chemical.
2. One should limit the intake of foods that make sugar. To avoid them entirely is to go without the ordinary food.
3. Yes, of some kinds.
4. I doubt it.

OPERATION USUALLY CURES.

A. J. W. writes:

1. Is operation a successful cure for hernia?
2. Is there more than an average chance, if care is exercised after the operation, of a recurrence?
3. If there is no operation, does hernia gradually grow worse, even though a truss is worn?
4. Is it necessary to wear a truss or other protective device after operation?

REPLY.

1. Yes, as a rule.
2. Recurrence is not to be expected, but it sometimes happens.
3. I expect so, but the progress downward is slow. Wearing a truss cures some cases.
4. It may be best to wear a binder for a while, but not permanently.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS.

Chicago, April 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If "A" has a checking account and "B" has "A" make out checks for "B's" personal bills giving "A" cash for the checks, which is deposited in "A's" checking account and the bank fails before the checks go through, whose duty is it to stand the loss, or, in other words, pay the bills again, "A" or "B"?

The drawer must make good if the holder is not chargeable with delay. Sec. 185 of the negotiable instruments law is as follows: "A check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after its issue, and notice of dishonor given to the drawer as provided for in the case of bills of exchange, or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of the loss caused by the delay."

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

HOW TO KNOW THE WILD FLOWERS.

It is very nice to be able to determine the name and family of the pretty wild flowers we see in the glorious springtime. First, let us take the lovely purple violet, filling the air with heavenly fragrance. It is easy to distinguish the violet because there is always a large, heavy woman standing on them. She has just got out of a 1925 much bedraggled car with five children. The large, heavy woman, not the car. "Here's plenty of swell vilets," the large, heavy woman says, "you yunguns get busy an' pick a lot of 'em to take home." So the five children of the large, heavy woman, not the car, get exceedingly busy and tear the pretty purple violets from the ground. So thus you will know the violets.

Let us now study another lovely flower of early spring, the Dutchman's-breeches. How are we to know which of the sweet wild flowers of springtime are Dutchman's-breeches and not Dutchman's-coats or Dutchman's-vests? Let us wait and we shall find out. Ah, here comes a bus and lets out a lot of merry picnickers. They gaze around at the lovely wild flowers that make the meadow so beautiful and a tall, angular lady with spectacles says: "Pick plenty of these things and we will put 'em on our picnic dinner table and what you have left over you can take back with you. These are Dutchman's-breeches." Ah, Dutchman's-breeches. Now we know.

There is still another beautiful flower of the springtime that we should know. It is the lady's-slipper. Now, how can we be sure to recognize this heaven-sent visitor of early spring? It has a Latin name, Cypripedium, but that does not help us much. Also, should we look closely at the pretty little wild flower we would observe it resembles a lady's-slipper, size 2 on a D last, although, of course, much smaller. It is such a gorgeous little flower and very easy to recognize if we but wait a minute.

Ah, here comes an automobile with a large load of ladies—at least five. The car stops and out pour the ladies with shrill whoops of joy. "Here they are," chortles one. "I knew we would find 'em if we jest kept going. Try 'em on, Gert, they're lady's-slippers—must be about your size." "Oh, shut up," says one of the ladies, who must be the Gert addressed. "The big idea is to pick 'em and not stand around makin' wisecracks." So the ladies pick very rapidly and soon the patch of lady's-slippers is swept clean.

As we come back to the city we shall be glad that we have learned the names of the wild flowers. We do not have to point to the wilted flowers that have been tossed out along the roadside and merely remark as we point at them, "Flowers!" Ah, no, we can say: "See where they have thrown out all their purple violets or Dutchman's-breeches or lady's-slippers," as the case may be. It is much more satisfactory. Know the wild flowers.

GYPSY WEALTH.

The only time I wish for wealth
Is when the gypsies bring
The shining wares that they have found
In Cairo or Peking.

And I who cannot buy a thing
Must sit there and pretend
I have a pocketful of gold
I might be coaxed to spend.

Supposing on a sun-bright day
A gypsy lad should knock
And think I ought to choose a bowl
Or gold embroidered frock.

And he should show me all his wares,
A peacock fan, a ring,
An extra verse from some old song

A colored wind he'd caught some place
And bottled in a jar,
And then on top of all of these
He placed a gypsy star.

I never could afford a star,
A bottled wind, or fan,
So I should be polite and say,

HELEN WELSHIMER.

GEN. SMEDLEY D. BUTLER is in again! This time he tells of his exploits as a spy in Mexico when we were close to a war with that country under the Huerta regime. Gen. Butler says he donned various disguises, but as we gaze on his face so copiously reproduced in all the newspapers we believe our first thought that the general disguised himself as a beautiful young flower girl selling orchids to support her widowed mother is all wrong.

HUBERT THE HIPPO, a pet rhinoceros, has been foully slain in South Africa. And we used to think that when people made faces at our little Sealyham Thomas Atkins as we led him around the block (or he led us around the block, as you will) that we would like to own a pet rhinoceros so that nobody would dare give him a dirty look. But the bumping off of Hubert the Hippo kills that idea. Anyhow, going carefully over a pet rhinoceros to see if he had a flea would be a long and tedious job.

LAGNIAPPE.

AND NOW the commonwealth of Illinois is going to put a tax on cigarets, cigars, and pipe tobacco. At first we thought we'd jump in old seven-ninety-nine and go down to Indiana whenever we wanted to smoke a cigaret, but that seems a trifle expensive. Anyhow, Max the Bootlegger just called up and said not to worry, that he'd bootleg all the cigarets to us we could possibly want. What with bootlegged gasoline, hootch, license tags, butter, barred books, and tobacco life is just one darn bootleg after another.

A LEGISLATOR down in Springfield said that we, the people, need the tax on tobacco to make us "tax conscious." Oh gosh, legislator, tax conscious! We've been nothing else but for years and years. Tax conscious! That's our middle name. R. H. L.

FEELING SORRY FOR US

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 8, 1915.

LONDON.—The Lusitania has been sunk! A statement issued by the British admiralty says the total number saved from the ship is 658. If this estimate is correct the number lost is 1,446. Among those reported lost is Alfred G. Vanderbilt of New York and it is also feared that Charles Frohman, theatrical man, has perished. The Lusitania, swinging northeast of Cape Clear, came in sight of the Irish coast early yesterday and started north for St. George's channel. It was going at full speed. As has been done ever since the German submarines were seen in the Irish sea, the liner had its lifeboats swung out on their davits ready for immediate use and all the watertight bulkheads and compartments were tightly closed. It was shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the wireless operator at Land's End, Ireland, caught this hurriedly: "Come at once. Big list. Position ten miles south of Kinsale." That was all that ever came out of the ship, so far as can be learned. The torpedo of the German submarine burst inside the ship and sent suffocating fumes throughout the vessel, with a sickening and stifling effect. It is said that the big ship went down within a half hour after the torpedo struck, giving little chance for the launching of the lifeboats. Reports from London state that the Lusitania was hit without warning.

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson and his advisers and official Washington generally were appalled at the news of the attack on the Lusitania by a German submarine and the report of the loss of many lives. Tonight the President, Secretary of State Bryan and several other members of the cabinet, together with the higher officials of the state department, are gathered at the White House discussing the portentous catastrophe fraught with so many possibilities of vital consequences to the United States. If any Americans either among the passengers or the members of the crew lost their lives the United States will face the gravest situation that the great war has produced up to date, so far as American interests are concerned. The public is aroused at the outrage and a widespread agitation for the invocation by the government of the sternest measures is advocated. German embassy officials admitted that they knew the Lusitania would be torpedoed on its next trip from New York to Liverpool.

WICHITA, Kas.—Carrie Nation, the militant anti-saloon crusader, has been placed in solitary confinement and under constant guard in the Sedgwick county jail as a result of her pouncing upon a turnkey and biting and beating him unmercifully in an attempt to escape.

CHICAGO.—Miss Elizabeth Smith and Robert Stevenson Jr. were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George W. Smith, 514 North State street, by the Rev. Father Riordan. Another wedding of the day was that of Miss Lena Nusbaum, daughter of R. E. Nusbaum, 4239 Grand boulevard, and Edwin Austrian, who were married at the Standard club by Dr. Emil G. Hirsch.

PARSONS, Kas.—Word has been received here that the surveyors on the Muskogee and Fort Smith branch of the Missouri Pacific railroad have been driven off by Cherokee Indians. The Indians are reported determined.

VIENNA.—The prince of Wales and Prince and Princess William of Prussia arrived here to be present at the marriage of Prince Rudolph of Austria and Princess Stephanie of Belgium. The king and queen of the Belgians received the deputation from the city of Vienna, to whom they expressed heartfelt pleasure at a tie which was about to unite Belgium and Austria.

CHICAGO.—Miss Agnes Ritchie, daughter of Hugh Ritchie, Esq., was married to George A. Hunter of the firm of Cunningham & Hunter at the home of the bride's parents on Goethe street, on May 3, by the Rev. David Swing, pastor of Central church. The wedding, although strictly private, was very elegant and the bride was the recipient of many costly presents.

MR. TRAYLOR'S REMARKS.

Chicago, May 6.—Mr. Traylor denounces many phases of the stock market as "crapshooting and gambling," and argues for a limitation of margin speculators to shut out the small fry stock gamblers.

Two years ago any such statement would have been characterized as coming from a socialist, communist or other nonauthentic American. How times do change!

It is easy enough to trace the growth of stock market gambling. Back about twenty years ago some astute personnel manager hit upon the plan of selling company stock to employés, and thus reducing the possibility of their organizing into "radical" [A. F. of L.] labor unions. Making the workers partners by giving them stock on the installment plan was [and is] generally accepted by nearly all corporations.

But the plan proved to be a boomerang. Workers began to follow the stock market; margin purchasing began, and in many instances workingmen made more in one transaction than they earned by a year's labor in the plant. Thus the laborer, the mechanic, the corner butcher and the undertaker played the market. That they were inexperienced speculators and drove stock up out of all proportion to its economic earning power was one reason for the crash of 1929. The damage has been done, however; industrialists are reaping as they sowed, and judging from the seriousness of the remarks made by Mr. Traylor, the harvest has turned into a whirlwind.

S. J. FOLEY.

MR. MELLON AS ANTIDOTE.

Chicago, May 6.—In THE TRIBUNE this morning is a report about how Mr. Melvin A. Traylor "stood up in the International Chamber of Commerce" meeting at Washington and "shook up the dry bones of complacency" . . . "that left 1,000 business men from thirty-five countries gasping for breath."

He likened the stock brokers to crap shooters, ordered the farmers to take their medicine, and separated the scrubwomen, day laborers, small home owners, wives and youths from the "intelligent and wealthy" and faced the facts that "there must be not only retrenchment, but a reform of taxing machinery"—surely a plenty about other people's business, but nary a word about banking.

And in today's press we read that "in 1930 there were 1,345 bank suspensions in the United States, and in the first quarter of 1931, 370, according to the federal reserve bulletin," which isn't such pleasant news to scrub women, day laborers, small home owners, wives, youths, crap shooters, or the intelligent and wealthy.

The day would surely have been ruined if it had not been for Uncle Andy Mellon quieting us down to almost normal with a few subtle remarks such as, "The world is passing through one of the most extensive depressions it has ever known . . . the more severe because it followed a world-wide war." Uncle Andy steadies our faith in the future when he is reported as saying that he did not share the belief that there was anything fundamentally wrong with the social system of this or other industrialized countries and "the standard of living must be maintained at all cost, and certainly the present is not time to undertake drastic and doubtful experiments—that the troubles which all of us face at this time cannot be cured by any quick and easy method, or at some one else's expense."

Thus we calm down to continue about our business in our own humble way trying to earn an honest dollar, knowing that if we do get the dollar we can well trust it with some average banker until we want it back again to spend with some crap shooter if we choose to spend it that way, just as the system generally seems to want to do.

C. M. H.

ADVICE REJECTED.

Lombard, Ill., May 6.—When one borrows money from a broker without matching it with ten thousand dollars of his own, it is a crap game. But when he borrows from a banker it is elevated to the dignity of a business deal.

All but the largest investors should be taken from the broker and turned over to the bankers' tender care. The latter have securities to sell, and no doubt will be pleased to give the investor the benefit of their superior business judgment. In view of the record of bank failures during the last decade, the public should be exceedingly well pleased with this prospect.

C. F. BENES.

MESTROVIC'S INDIANS.

Chicago, May 5.—In today's TRIBUNE Charles D. Moore complains because Mestrovic's Indians are empty handed. Mestrovic, by the absence of detail in these works, makes plain at once that his object was not to reproduce horses and Indians but to make concrete the force and power that was the American Indian. The exigencies of the Indian's life endowed him with a streamlined power devoid of any frippery which might hinder him in contest with circumstances imposed solely by nature. To typify this power, this elemental strength, it is essential that no unnecessary detail blur the focus of attention. Therefore Mestrovic's powerful, unhampered Indians.

However, it would seem that Mr. Moore does not like this and would have dollies on the horses, lacy bloomers on the Indians and, no doubt, love birds and doves hovering in the air.

BOND ISSUES AND TAXES.

Chicago, May 3.—There is much complaint these days about taxes and howling for a reduction of them, and yet when bond issues are proposed there is practically no opposition to them and rarely are they not carried. In the recent primary every south side bond issue went through easily. If taxpayers want taxes reduced the place to begin is not in effect but cause.

GERMANY ANGRY AS RUMANIA BARS ENVOYS OF TRADE

Bucharest Told Action Was "Most Uncivil."

BUCHAREST, May 7.—(AP)—The refusal of the Rumanian government to permit a German commercial treaty delegation to enter Bucharest while the conference of the little entente is sitting has developed into a diplomatic incident.

The government suddenly broke off negotiations, although the German representatives were already on their way.

Trade Circles Distressed.

They learned that Germany was willing to make very favorable concessions to obtain the commercial treaty. She was willing to bind herself, it was learned, to buy 150,000 carloads of Rumanian oats and 50,000 tons of wheat at very favorable prices and was prepared to grant a considerable loan even before the treaty was signed.

The prevailing belief here was that Rumania was prepared to proceed with negotiations, but that Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia, other members of the entente, reminded her of their duty toward the union and toward France.

Carol Disrupts Parley.

The wishes of the other two countries, it was said, were conveyed to King Carol when he and King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia met Monday in a motorboat in the middle of the Danube. After the meeing of the kings Carol is said to have instructed Foreign Minister Ghika and Finance Minister Argetoianu to discontinue the German negotiations.

The instruction, it was believed, was particularly unwelcome to Argetoianu, who is a member of the governing board of a Dresden bank.

Four Die as Cloudburst Wreaks Havoc in Germany

ASCHAFFENBURG, Bavaria, Germany, May 7.—(AP)—Four lives were lost and heavy damages resulted when a cloudburst struck southwest Germany today. Torrents of rain poured down for hours, swelling rivers, flooding low lying territory, tearing out bridges, inundating fields, and destroying crops. The four persons, including a young boy and girl, were drowned when a bridge collapsed near Hosbach.

Plans Atlantic Hop

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Laura Ingalls, the first woman to make a round trip coast to coast flight, today announced her intention of flying the Atlantic, solo, within a few months.

Backing for the flight will be provided by a private corporation, Miss Ingalls said. She would not divulge the type of plane she would use or the route she would take.

Miss Ingalls denied she was contemplating a race with Ruth Nichols of Rye, N. Y., who also is preparing for a trans-ocean flight. She said she knew nothing of the latter's plans.

Ruth Will Fly from St. John.

HAVRE, France, May 7.—(AP)—Capt. H. Railey, manager of Ruth Nichols, said on debarking from the liner Paris today that the American girl flyer would make her proposed trans-Atlantic flight from St. John, Newfoundland, to Le Bourget, France, between May 20 and June 1.

GRANT DIVORCE, CASH PAYMENT TO MRS. CORBOY

Mrs. Florence Fitzgerald Corboy of Los Angeles yesterday won a divorce and a reported cash settlement of $100,000 from John A. Corboy, wealthy president of the M. J. Corboy Plumbing company. The decree was granted by Judge Rudolph Desort of the Superior court on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Corboy also was granted the custody of their three children—Florence, 16 years old; Celeste, 14, and Frances, 12. The decree provides that Corboy must pay $500 a month for the children's support.

Through his attorneys, Socrates & Davis, Corboy originally sued Mrs. Corboy for divorce, alleging that she deserted him in 1925. The couple were married in 1912. In her cross-bill Mrs. Corboy charged intoxication, cruelty, desertion, and misconduct.

The divorce was granted to Mrs. Corboy following a conference between the litigants and their attorneys in Judge Desort's chambers. Mrs. Corby has been sued for $25,000 damages by one of the co-respondents named in her cross-bill.

Handcuffed Clerk Sounds Siren Alarm.

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Samuel Siegel looked down the muzzles of two revolvers today, felt a holdup man slipping handcuffs around his wrists and thought of the $450,000 worth of diamonds that the robbers were about to get. Then he stuck out his foot and set off a siren with his toe.

Siegel, who is a bookkeeper for the diamond merchants, was alone in the office when three men entered, broke down the partition leading from the outer to the inner office, and trained their weapons on him.

Horn Sounds Alarm.

"Keep your trap shut or we'll give you the business," said one of them. Two advanced toward Siegel and one retired to guard the door. The safe was open, and the stones, most of them unset, were lying all about. As one of the thugs clicked the cuffs—which later it took the engineer of the building twenty-five minutes to file off—on Siegel, the bookkeeper made the one quick motion which was necessary to bring the toe of his boot in contact with the alarm button. A horn on the ground floor began wailing like a convention of banshees, and a number on an indicator flashed up.

Grapples with Guard.

The robbers for a while seemed too stunned by their victim's effrontery to move, and then Frank Munson, 56 years old, special guard in the building, went into action. He went up in the elevator and to the door of the office, where the man on guard grappled with him.

The thief called to his companions for help, and they came out. Each brought the butt of his revolver down on Munson's head and all three ran. The guard started after them, but collapsed.

Shed Guns as They Go.

By this time the tenants of the building and people in the street were beginning to shout and run about. As Siegel came out of the office, helpless with his hands pinioned, the three who had become fugitives instead of successful holdup men scampered down the stairs, shedding revolvers as they went. One was found on the ninth, another on the fifth, and another on the third floor. At the third floor they went to the back of the building, into the court, over a fence and through another building to 46th street. There one of them was caught but the others escaped.

VIRGIL BETRAYS FEAR AS MURDER TRIAL DRAGS ON

Hostility Alarms Youth; Pick Eight Jurors.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Valparaiso, Ind., May 7.—[Special.]—Virgil Kirkland was a badly frightened youth tonight. His second trial for murder was nine days old and his attorneys had found only eight citizens who could guarantee their client an impartial trial.

The remainder of the more than 250 men and women who have marched through the jury box have not troubled to veil their hostility towards the 20 year old former Gary high school boy accused of the murder and rape of 18 year old Arlene Draves. This constantly reiterated unfriendliness has had an effect upon even the phlegmatic Virgil.

Tries to Joke, But Can't.

At the beginning of this trial Kirkland was the same jaunty fellow whose cocksure attitude upon the stand at his first trial militated against him and was believed to be partly responsible for the verdict of guilty and sentence of life imprisonment imposed by the jury. As the days passed, the youth's nerves have been visibly frayed.

Today the defendant made a pitiful effort to regain his former assurance, attempting to laugh and joke with the two deputy sheriffs who have him in custody during court hearings. At a recess his mother and stepfather, who are constantly in the courtroom, gathered around him as if seeing through his acting and whispered to him comfortingly.

Eight Jurors Selected.

Some progress was made in the seemingly hopeless task of picking a jury today. The defense finally decided upon eight men whom they considered qualified jurors. Seven of these eight are deemed suitable by the state.

A protest by Prosecutor John Underwood caused Judge Grant Crumpacker to withdraw an order directing the sheriff to go out into the streets and pick up any person for jury service. The state took the position that the regular procedure of summoning veniremen should be followed. A new panel of 40 men and women will appear tomorrow.

The judge has told attorneys that they must speed up the job of selecting a jury and both sides were optimistic that a jury will be completed tomorrow or by Saturday noon for a certainty.

Hearing of evidence is expected to take about two weeks.

BICYCLE SKIDS, RIDER KILLED BY HEAVY TRUCK

Boy Fatally Hurt in Other Accident.

Edwin Peterson, 38 years old, 2117 North Western avenue, a toolmaker, was killed yesterday when his bicycle skidded and he fell beneath a heavy truck at La Salle and Clark streets.

This death and two others increased the Cook county motor toll since Jan. 1 to 402. The victims:

Thomas Vondra, 2 years old, 1531 Wesley avenue, Berwyn. Died in St. Anne's hospital of injuries received on Tuesday when he was struck by a truck while playing in the alley at the rear of his home.

John P. Enkel, 12 years old, 5310 South Ashland avenue. Fatally injured when struck by the auto of Philip Matthews, 3338 North Marshfield avenue, in Ashland avenue near 50th street. Matthews took the boy to the Southwest General hospital, where he died. The driver told police the boy ran from behind another car.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury investigating the death of George W. Johnson, wealthy business man of Moline, Ill., who was struck and fatally injured on April 25 in front of the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Another Driver Ordered Held.

Testimony at the inquest was that Johnson was first struck by an auto driven by Frank Hall, 428 St. James place, and then run over by another car, driven by Liston Lange, 156 Fuller lane, Winnetka. Hall did not stop and was arrested later at his home. He testified that he did not know his car had struck any one.

Gira Gutrcia, 35 years old, 608 De Koven street, driver of the auto in which two youths were killed when it collided with a parked car at Jackson boulevard and Ashland avenue early yesterday, was recommended held for the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter by the coroner's jury. The two youths killed were Joseph Tullio, 18 years old, 1535 Elburn avenue, and Charles Muzzillo, 16 years old, 827 South Winchester avenue. A third passenger, Charles English, 17 years old, 909 South Winchester avenue, was seriously injured.

4 DIE, 31 HURT AS SCHOOL BUS IS HIT BY TRAIN

Merced, Cal., May 7.—(AP)—Four children were killed and the driver of their school bus probably fatally injured when the vehicle was struck by a Santa Fe freight train this afternoon. Six children were expected to die, and twenty-five others were hurt, some seriously.

Those killed were Jean Ahr, 10; Robert Fuller, 10; Bill Epsen, 8, and his twin sister, Dolores.

The bus was driven by J. P. Kregger. His wife was among the seriously injured.

Kregger said he did not see the train. Conductor J. A. Holmes of the freight train said the bus did not stop at the track, but drove ahead into the train, with the engineer blowing the whistle, and the wigwag signal at the crossing working.

RADIO LICENSE RENEWAL INQUIRY SET FOR JUNE 15

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—A decision to conduct hearings to determine its policy toward renewal of more than 1,409 radio licenses held by the Radio Corporation of America and its reputed subsidiaries was reached today by the radio commission.

The hearings, set for June 15 before the entire commission, will decide whether it should refuse renewal applications of the companies involved, in view of recent Federal court decisions holding the Radio corporation's license contracts with other companies were illegal.

EWING ESTATE LEFT IN TRUST FOR 10 YRS.; SON NAMED TRUSTEE

New Orleans, La., May 7.—(AP)—The will of the late Col. Robert Ewing, Louisiana newspaper publisher, probated today, left his estate in trust for ten years and appointed his son, John D. Ewing, as the sole trustee.

"I know by experience that the policy of a newspaper must be controlled by one man, and that power I here lodge in my son, John D. Ewing," the will read.

It directed that the four newspapers, the New Orleans States, the Shreveport (La.) Times, the Monroe (La.) News Star, and the Monroe (La) Morning World be operated by the trustee for the full term of the trust, except that after five years the heirs were given the privilege by unanimous action to dispose of the New Orleans States.

The estate was divided into seven parts, equal parts going to his widow and his six children.

Special legacies were made to employés, $5,000 to J. Walker Ross, managing editor of the New Orleans States; $1,000 to J. C. Aby, columnist of the States, and $750 to James Fisher, business manager of the States.

E. P. CURTIS, 56, RAILCONDUCTORS' PRESIDENT, DIES

Kansas City, Mo., May 7.—(AP)—E. P. Curtis, 56, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., national president of the Order of Railway Conductors, died tonight in a hotel here. He became ill Sunday after arriving for a convention of the order he headed. His illness consisted of a relapse from a recent attack of influenza.

The body will be taken to San Antonio tomorrow night for burial. A memorial service will be held here tomorrow morning by the national convention of the brotherhood.

Mr. Curtis had been active for many years in the work of the order he headed at death. In 1906 he was elected a vice president, and from 1923 until 1928, when he was named president, he served as general secretary.

STEAMER SINKS TUG IN FOG; 3 OF CREW ARE KILLED

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Ploughing blindly through a dense fog in Long Island sound, the 5,000 ton all steel coastwise steamship New York, inbound from Boston with more than 300 passengers, crashed into the middle of the tug Trimount off Race Rock early today, cut the wooden craft in half, and sank it with three of its crew of eight.

None of the 300 passengers aboard the steamer was injured, although the majority of them were tossed from their beds.

U.S. ACTS TO HALT BROADCASTING OF LOTTERIES

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—The radio commission today took steps to stop the broadcasting of lotteries and similar schemes of chance by radio stations. It served notice that should a complaint be filed against any one station, hearings would be held on that station's application for renewal of its operating license.

"Simply Brushing Hair Now Ends Gray Hair"

Francis X. Bushman

"What actors long ago acknowledged as a requisite of success, business, professional, and even laboring men are today accepting—that gray hair must not be shown!"

"Associated as it is with old age, no man wants to be considered weak and 'used up' because of gray hair appearing early in life, as it so often does in this day of high pressure living.

"And as for the girls, I don't need to say that they consider gray hair just as undesirable, especially since now it can be ended as they brush their hair."

Applied As You Brush Your Hair

Now you can quickly, easily and surely end those gray hair handicaps by sprinkling a few drops of Kolor-Bak on your brush before brushing your hair.

If your hair is now gray, Kolor-Bak will once more give it that youth-like color. If beginning to gray, Kolor-Bak will banish those invading gray hairs and keep your hair looking young.

Method Defies Detection

No one need ever know you use Kolor-Bak, no one can ever tell. Your hair will never have that harsh, flat, dull, "dyed" look, so all-revealing. There will be no telltale streaks. You cannot tell which hairs once were gray if you use Kolor-Bak each morning. As colorless and pleasant to use as water, Kolor-Bak does not leave the hair sticky.

HOLLYWOOD ROMANCES

FOR the first serial "talkie" ever broadcasted, tune in each Monday and Friday at 7:00 p. m. on WBBM, and listen to "Hollywood Romances"—a humanly interesting story of youthful ambition seeking fame and fortune.

In the cast is Norma, a pampered daughter of a Chicago millionaire, who arrogantly believes that her father's wealth will insure her a place in the "talkies." Joan is engaged by Norma's mother to look after Norma. Jack, a friend of Joan, is an ambitious free lance scenario writer.

At this stage of the serial, the two girls are already in Hollywood. Norma has just met "Buddy" Rogers. He has promised to make her his leading lady. Is it any wonder that she says, "When one has beauty and talent, there really is no difficulty in getting into the 'talkies'." She awaits "Buddy" Rogers' call with every confidence.

TUNE IN STATION WBBM AT 7 O'CLOCK TONIGHT and find out what happens when "Buddy" Rogers phones Norma to arrange for her to become his leading lady

RAIN DISAPPOINTS THOUSANDS AT BLOSSOM FETE

Michigan Festival to Be Resumed Today.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 7. —[Special.]—While the pageantry of the blossoms throughout Berrien county's famous fruit belt of the state continued today to furnish a setting of riotous color, charm and fragrance in the orchard sections ruled over by Queen Jane Filstrup, formally crowned monarch last night of the territory surrounding the twin cities—Benton Harbor and St. Joseph—cool weather, settling into a drizzle of rain this noon, caused a last minute postponement of the annual children's parade scheduled for the afternoon.

GOV. BRUCKER.

Thousands of children and spectators gathered here to witness this spectacle, one of the highlights of southwestern Michigan's ninth annual blossom festival week, were disappointed. The program is now pushed ahead, crowding all the major outdoor events into tomorrow and Saturday.

Will Be Held Today.

The parade was tentatively set for 1:30 tomorrow p. m. in St. Joseph, but over a shorter route than originally planned on account of the annual blossom pageant set for 2:30 p. m. at Filstrup field, Benton Harbor. The colorful parade will serve as a curtain raiser for the pageant if the weather warms up.

Queen Jane and her court of 33 Michigan beauties boarded the big blossom bus again this afternoon. They were entertained this noon at luncheon by the Lions club at the Whitcomb. The queens will attend church blossom Sunday, May 10, the conclusion of the festival.

Gov. W. M. Brucker and his wife and family, with 90 members of the house of representatives and Michigan state senators, will witness the blossom parade here Saturday.

River Carnival Tomorrow.

Blossom Queen Jane rides in the Century Sea Mate with her maids of honor, Miss St. Joseph and Miss Kalamazoo. The Mullins Sea Eagle carries Cecilia Eisenhart, "Miss Buchanan," queen of 1930. A gay galaxy of other crafts carries passengers.

New swimming entries today were Max Cogdill, Robert Kerher, and Jerry Miller, Northwestern university.

CALUMET HARBOR DICKER TO BE RESUMED SOON

Negotiations between the Nickel Plate railroad and the city for a new contract ordinance for the construction of a harbor in Lake Calumet will be resumed soon. This was announced yesterday after a conference between W. A. Colston, vice president of the railroad, and Commissioner of Public Works Sprague.

An agreement was reached between the two officials, according to the announcement, that a new ordinance will have to be drafted because of amendments to the state law since the passage of the original ordinance. The original ordinance, which was drafted under Mayor Dever, was held in abeyance by the last administration.

A FEW HINTS ON HOW TO EAT YOUR RADISHES

With Butter They Have an Unusual Flavor.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

Just the extra touch that turns supper into dinner or lunch into luncheon—radishes—in company with celery, olives and nuts—negligible perhaps in comparison with the rest of the menu, but as necessary to the spring tables as sweet nothings are to the spring romance.

You may like to gedunk your radishes in hills of salt and nibble off the petals of your rose or tulip or whatever picturesque form to which your hostess has put her skill. The French, however, have a habit of absent-mindedly spreading them with butter, as they consume numerous quantities while waiting for the soup or the entrée to make its appearance.

Eat Them with Butter.

And if you have no fear of what butter will do to your figure or are on one of those ingratiating new diets that demand butter at every turn, try it sometime and you'll find a new flavor to add to your collection.

You need no addition of salt to your butter, in fact, unsalted butter is best because it bring out the underlying delicate flavors and tones down the biting, burning sensation of the stronger varities.

The mechanics of eating a radish deserve a little attention. Cooks who insist on cutting off every bit of the tops ought really to serve hairpins or some similar arrangement to assist the consumer. But the best way is to leave a half inch or so of the green to form a natural handle—and there are no end of green lovers who will eat the handle, too.

Radish Greens Delightful.

Radish greens, as a matter of fact, are considered quite a delicacy by many. Their flavor is similar to spinach but much more delicate and without that ability to set the teeth on edge.

Although thought of as an appetizer by most people, radishes can be and are used in other courses, notably in salads. Sliced very thin the strong varities lose their bite; and any red skinned variety adds color to the salad plate.

Cooked radishes may be a novelty but there are several ways to prepare them in hot dishes liked by the radish gourmet. They may be boiled in salted water [for about 25 minutes] and then served with melted butter; or, after boiling, they can be cooked with butter and grated cheese until the cheese is melted.

Creamed Radishes.

Another way of preparing them is to peel and slice and fry in butter, either with or without parboiling. And here's a recipe for creamed radishes:

Boiling water.
Dash pepper.
¾ cup boiling water.

Wash and clean radishes leaving them whole. There should be about one and two-thirds cups. Put them into a saucepan, add salt, then enough boiling water to cover. Cook rapidly until tender, replenishing water if necessary. About ten minutes is required. In the meantime prepare a white sauce of the last six ingredients. When the radishes are tender [test them with a fork], drain and add white sauce. Serve immediately. Yield: Five servings.

An unusual salad of radishes and cucumbers is made by paring cucumbers and cutting in 2 inch pieces. The cuts, as if for thick slices, are made without cutting all the way through. A slice of radish is inserted in each cut, and French dressing is used.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Breakfast! The very word is like a knell—the knell of the morning snooze, of the guiltily snatched cat nap after the alarm has sounded. Experience has proved, says the host of family providers, that the hour from eight to nine ante-meridian should be spent in solitude and silence by the large proportion of the civilized world yet in the normal household consisting of father, mother, and two or more representatives of the younger generation, the first meal of the day is frequently the one shared simultaneously by all.

A group of men recently expounded their views on this subject. A doctor, a banker, a broker and a lawyer hailed the passing of the breakfast bell, which rounded up all delinquents at an appointed hour, and called for the day when the master of the household might obtain complete release from the ceremony of the family breakfast.

Why a Social Occasion?

"I am a tired business man who is unfortunately more tired in the morning than at night," commented the 57 year old banker. "Breakfast occurs at the wrong end of the day to be made a social occasion, so why attempt it? One's nerves creak until they have been lubricated with coffee and even one's nearest should be spared the sight of one's dearest when his morale is unfortified by the only stimulant the law allows."

Consensus on this point by the four anti-social "breakfasters" was followed by a review of the old fashioned institution when, with forced "Good mornings," all members of the family assembled on the outskirts of the dining room and waited for the flinging open of the doors.

In those days breakfast was scarcely to be distinguished from dinner. Chops or steak with potatoes followed a course of some peculiarly filling, if not swelling, variety of porridge. All kinds of breads and muffins formed a heavy accompaniment to the more important dishes; eggs and bacon lurked in the offing; fruits of the earth were passed in due season; and coffee and tea shed their aroma upon an orgy of overeating.

Too Much Talk.

"But the excess of food could be survived if it wasn't for the excess of social chitchat," broke in the venerable doctor. "How trivial and annoying is a remark under the glare of the recently risen sun in comparison with the same comment under the soft rays of candlelight. An atmosphere of bare reality shines over the morning table which is best experienced alone."

The technique of breakfast is not easily acquired, they all agreed, for it is a real art and subject to individual treatment. The idea of a tray in the "sanctum sanctorum" of one's room was cast aside for a simple early morning menu served in the breakfast room with the newspaper, its only accompaniment.

"When 'café aut lait' is enjoyed in bed, crumbs 'au lit' inevitably accompanied it," mused the broker. "Then there is the practical question of precedence between the order of the bath and the breakfast. To eat before the morning plunge seems to be putting the cart before the horse, and there is the childhood maxim to be considered regarding the danger of bathing less than an hour after eating. On the other hand, how effeminate to crawl back into one's chrysallis of blankets after having spread the wings to the refreshment of a shower."

Vote for Breakfast Alone.

Breakfast may form an essential link in the intimacy between a mother and her growing sons and daughters who must be bundled off to school or the playground, the conference further agreed, but let the male come before or after and enjoy his morning repast in solitary grandeur.

"So may the breakfast of the old régime be upset," said the lawyer as he summed up the situation, "and may a republic be establish in which individual breakfasts are served at whatever hour and under whatever conditions the head of the house may choose. Let him enter the breakfast room alone with no greeting to be administered. Let a softly shod maid supply his needs with iced orange juice, crisp hot toast, a perfectly poached egg, and coffee poured from a silver pot. His spirits will expand, his disposition sweeten, and he will enter upon his day's routine with a feeling of geniality toward the world in general."

HONEY PROTECTS ITSELF AGAINST BEING SPOILED

Honey, unlike many foods which decompose easily as a result of bacterial action, has a unique method of protecting itself from spoilage by literally drying the organisms to death.

A. P. Sturtevant, bee specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, says honey has the peculiar and distinctive property of absorbing moisture from anything that comes in contact with it. A certain amount of moisture is necessary to maintain life in all living organisms, so when bacteria comes in contact with honey and this vital amount of moisture is withdrawn, the organism dies.

EAT MORE LAMB CLUB FORMED BY WOOL GROWERS

An "Eat More Lamb" club has been organized in Montana under the sponsorship of the state's wool growers' association. The organization points out that the United States could use many times more lamb meat if consumption paralleled that in other countries.

United States consumption of lamb per person is said to be 6.7 pounds annually; in Canada, 9 pounds; England, 27 pounds, New Zealand, 97 pounds. Sixty per cent of the United States consumption is said to be in an area east of Chicago and north of the Potomac river.

POTATOES PEELED BY MACHINERY IN CARLOAD LOTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 7.—Housewives or henpecked husbands who would like to condemn the task of potato peeling will get a thrill out of a visit to Berlin's Potato Peeling institute.

It all started when a Berliner doped it out that there must be lots of people who'd rather have others peel their potatoes. He hired some women, a few potato peeling machines, and went out and signed up customers.

Today almost all the larger restaurants are his clients. Potatoes come to his institute by the carload. He employs half a hundred women to turn his machines.

And these women like to peel potatoes. They get paid for it, and don't have to eat them.

How to Impart Velvety Texture to a Custard

That velvety texture in a custard is not such a difficult condition to obtain in the finished product. Home economics specialists of New York State college recommend baking the custard by covering it, setting the container in a pan of water, and cooking it on top of the stove.

MUSK OXEN BROUGHT FROM GREENLAND TO ALASKA ARE PETTED

Musk oxen imported into Alaska last summer as an experiment in meat raising have become campus pets at the Alaska Agricultural college and school of mines students report. Fifteen bulls and 19 cows are thriving, giving no indication of pining for their birthplace in Greenland and in fact gaining at the average rate of half a pound a day.

MORE BROILERS GO ON MARKETS IN CHICAGOLAND

Prices Fall as Shipments Are Increased.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Good news for those who like young poultry fried or boiled! Meat markets within a few weeks will be able to furnish practically normal supplies of this widely demanded type of market chicken, whereas so far this year supplies haven't been able to keep up with the demand.

Within the last two weeks wholesale prices have come down six to eight cents a pound as a result of shipments becoming heavier both by truck and railroad into Chicago.

The low prices for eggs and other poultry are blamed for insufficient broilers so far this season, according to reports from several information centers that have had occasion to watch the situation. Farmers in many sections are said to have found that they could not afford to hire hatchery eggs or to buy hatchery chicks.

Spring Demands Heavier.

During January, February and March the custom hatching of chicks was at its lowest level in many years. Poultry dealers wondered if they would be receiving anywhere near normal supplies of the tender breasted young fowl that enjoys more than a five month season here. But the hatchery business found the later spring demands heavier, while out on the farms throughout sections where poultry is either a sideline or principal cash business the baby chicks were as numerous as ever.

"Farmers seem to have set every old hen they had available along in late winter," says Walter F. Priebe Jr., member of a Chicago poultry and produce firm. "Within the last three week receipts seem to have doubled. They are just beginning to show the effect of this farm hatching."

Prices have been up around 60 cents a pound retail for the dressed birds, but as the season gets under way this price is being lowered. Meat markets this week were selling dressed broilers for 45 cents a pound up to 51 cents. At present, weights are from two pounds to two and one-half, but heavier broilers will soon be arriving.

July Is Peak Month.

From April to the last of August is the usual season for this class of fowl in Chicago. The peak shipments usually are in July. Considering the farm situation the prediction is that Chicago will eat more broilers this summer than for some time.

Farmers have found that nearly everything they sell obtains lower prices. They are endeavoring to get the same amount of money as in other years, however, and reports indicate they will attempt to get this money by simply marketing more of their product, whether it is poultry or milk, eggs, meat, or grains.

Wholesale prices on broilers this week were from 30 to 36 cents per pound, depending on weight and quality. According to Charles McNeill of the Chicago Poultry board, trucks from nearby states bring in about two-thirds of the broilers marketed here.

In 1929 trucks brought into Chicago a total of 345,780 coops of chickens ready for distribution, while the railroads unloaded 114,580 coops. In the first four months this year the trucks again led the railroads about two to one, unloading 55,560 coops to 26,520 brought in in poultry freight cars.

Trucks Cover Big Area.

Trucks tap the surrounding states of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, and even some sections of South Dakota. The usual radius is about 150 miles from this city, although many travel 200 miles and more. The railroads bring in similar supplies, principally from Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Wisconsin, Iowa, South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska, and Kansas.

A NEW TREAT

Smoked Meats, Beef, Lamb Thrifty Week-End Buys

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the Chicago food council states: "Smoked meats and shoulder of beef and lamb are recommended to the housewife as the most economical meat buys over the coming week-end. These cuts are selling at prices which make them especially attractive to the housewife who is looking for bargains."

Market Reports Show Drop in Wholesale Prices

Increased receipts in Chicago of several seasonal fresh fruits and vegetables resulted in lower wholesale prices this week, according to reports from South Water market. Among the commodities so affected are potatoes, lettuce, asparagus, carrots, cucumbers, beans, and onions.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

I have discovered a labor and time saving method for applying hair tonic, hot oil, etc., to the scalp. Buy an eye dropper for 5 cents, fill it and run it through the hair as you would an ordinary comb, applying very light pressure. The entire operating can be done in about one minute, and the tonic or oil will cover the entire scalp, but the hair will remain drier than if applied by the tedious method of parting the hair in small strands and applying with a tooth brush, which has been known to take from half an hour to an hour, and the oil will still be hot by the time the towel is put on.

The eye dropper should be moved straight down from the center of the head in the direction the hair falls.

Mrs. A. L., Chicago.

To replace elastic, first rip the seam and firmly baste the end of the new piece to the old. Then as you withdraw the old the new is in place. Much more simple than using a bodkin, isn't it?

HERE'S A WAY TO MAKE THAT LETTUCE SALAD

Vinegar, Garlic, and Oil Make It Appetizing.

BY ANGELA PETESCH.

It is fortunate that lettuce receives so much support from dietitians and nutrition specialists. The popularity of lettuce is due in great part to the cry to include more and more of the green leafy vegetable in our diet to provide the roughage and the vitamins about which we hear so much and know so little.

Just a plain lettuce salad unembellished except for a simple oil dressing will aid in supplying this need. And the enjoyment and pleasure of eating such a salad is greatly enhanced by a charming service.

Leaf Lettuce Tasty.

Either leaf or head lettuce is satisfactory unless you have a particular aversion to one or the other. Fresh leaf lettuce which is growing in everybody's little garden plot this spring is especially tasty. When it is well washed, crisp it up in cold water and keep it cool until just a few minutes before dinner, at which time put a sufficient quantity to serve all in one large bowl and place it before the hostess' cover. Now an ordinary mixing bowl won't do if you have an artistic sense. A gayly colored crockery or pottery one that in itself is attractive is what you want.

In setting the table place a wooden salad spoon and fork within easy range of the hostess, as well as the salt and pepper and the olive oil-vinegar cruet. [It is possible to buy very attractive cruets that hold both the oil and the vinegar. The slender necks of the containers are curved in opposite directions so that you can pour one without spilling the other.] And there, over to the leeward perhaps, place a little white clove of garlic.

Vinegar Dissolves Salt.

Now, when the main course of the dinner is served the hostess may prepare the salad by first crushing the clove of garlic in the saladspoon with the wooden fork. Put in the same spoon enough salt to season properly and measure out the vinegar—two spoonfuls of vinegar to three of olive oil. The vinegar dissolves the salt and if allowed to stand just a moment in the spoon absorbs some of the flavor of the garlic. Just drain each spoonful of vinegar onto the lettuce, reserving the garlic.

After enough vinegar has been measured and thus blended with the garlic, the garlic is discarded. Then measure the oil in the proportion recommended and pour each spoonful directly on the lettuce as was done with the vinegar. With the wooden fork and spoon toss the lettuce lightly until it is thoroughly blended with the dressing.

Should Be Done Quickly.

And let all this be done with despatch so that the guests will not be out of the notion of eating salad by the time it reaches them. Then, too, the task must be seemingly no effort in order to create interest rather than sympathy.

Now the salad is ready to serve. Place the implements, the salad fork and spoon, in a convenient position so that they may be gracefully handled and allow each person to help himself according to his own tastes and ambitions.

Chef Can Choose From Forty Varieties of Strawberries

Several hundred varieties of strawberries permit selecting them according to taste if one has a tendency to criticise the strawberry for having too high an acidity. Specialists of the United States department of agriculture have found that about 40 varieties are grown commercially in the United States but that 19 constitute 96 per cent of the acreage.

The three leaders—Klondike, Aroma, and Howard 17—account for 63 per cent of the acreage in the country.

Climate and Soil Factors.

Climate and soil conditions are factors that determine to a large extent the best varieties to grow in the different sections of the country. The Missionary is the leading sort in Florida and along the Atlantic coast to Maryland.

Most other parts of the south prefer the Klondike. The Blakemore, a new berry developed by the department, is becoming popular in the Carolinas and as far north as New Jersey.

The Aroma is a favorite in most of the milder regions of the central states, including the northern part of Arkansas and Tennessee, and the southern parts of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. The Dunlap is popular in the remainder of the middle west.

New Varieties Introduced.

In the northwest, Marshall, Oregon, Ettersburg 121 and Clark are most widely grown, while the Howard 17 is king north of the Ohio and Potomac and east of the Mississippi.

In recent years varieties adapted to special purposes have taken their places by the side of the older ones. The Ettersburg 121, grown in Washington and Oregon, is preferred by canners, while the new Blakemore appears to be especially good for preserving. The ice cream trade prefers the Marshall and Klondike.

New varieties of strawberries are being introduced constantly, the department says. Many of them possess no special value as compared with the well established varieties, and most of them soon disappear from nurserymen's lists. Occasionally a new variety such as the Blakemore has merit enough to make a place for itself.

BUTTER EATING SHOWS INCREASE OF 4.3 PER CENT

Consumption of butter in the United States is on the increase this year, due to large supplies and low prices both wholesale and retail. Recent reports indicate the creamery butter makers in January, February and March turned out 23,110,000 more pounds than in the same period in 1930, while withdrawals of butter from cold storage were but 6,000,000 less than a year ago.

The consumption therefore was increased by 16,100,000 pounds, equal to 4.3 per cent. These figures were obtained by W. F. Jensen of the American Association of Creamery Butter Manufacturers.

... the most delicious of sea foods

From the North Pacific Ocean come the huge sea crabs called Tarabacani. The tender, juicy meat taken from their claws has a rare, sweet flavor. It is cooked, wrapped in parchment, and sealed in lacquered tins right on the fishing boats. The large white chunks of delicious meat are ready for serving as soon as you remove the wrapper!

Refreshing salads or hot entrees of any crabmeat dish is twice as delicious with Three Diamonds Brand Flaky Crabmeat! Sold at your grocer's in convenient-size cans, at moderate prices.

CRABMEAT IN RAMEKINS

Melt two tablespoons of butter, add flour to thicken and then one cup of soup stock. Heat until thick and smooth. Beat the yolks of two eggs lightly and gradually add to hot mixture. Then mix with one cup of crabmeat and ½ cup mushrooms cut in pieces. Season; heat thoroughly and serve on toasted patty shells, or on toast or baked in ramekins with a blanket of butter and bread crumbs.

ONE DAIRY COW TO EVERY FOUR PERSONS IN U.S.

Each Family, So to Speak, Has Own Bovine.

BY PAUL POTTER.

With about one dairy cow to every four persons in the United States today, each family may still be considered to have its own cow, except that it may be feeding and pasturing on farms far removed from those who consume its milk, cream and other dairy products daily.

This statement by a Chicago dairyman indicates the striking feat that has been accomplished with the increasing population in urban areas, maintaining a steady supply of farm produced foods, keeping them wholesome and delivering them fresh and safe for infant or adult at all times.

Chicago is said to have the best quality milk supply of any city in the nation, brought about by rigid inspection of dairy herds and farms and the handling of the milk until it reaches the consumer's doorstep. The average dairy farm represents an investment of more than $15,000, it is reported, much of which consists of modern equipment for keeping the milk pure and fresh from milking time to delivery.

Fresh Butter Supply.

Modern buttermaking methods have contributed toward the insuring of a fresh butter supply for the nation's three meals a day, according to L. C. Thomsen, dairy specialist at the University of Wisconsin. He cites the rapid strides made in this branch of the dairy industry since the days of 1890 when most families churned their own butter or bought it from a neighbor.

Science has given the modern creameryman means to control temperatures, degrees of ripening, and prevention of false odors or flavors, while refrigeration of distributing equipment brings the butter to the consumer with as high a grading as when it left the creamery. Butter in tubs, once the usual sight, is gradually giving way to the demand for neatly wrapped units in hand, air and moisture proof cartons.

Wide Cheese Assortment.

Few Americans appreciate that a wider assortment of cheeses are available in this country than in any other nation. According to the National Dairy Council of Chicago, there are 289 distinct varieties of cheese, while the different local names for the same product run the total into the thousands. They are classified as to soft or hard cheeses, the ripened or unripened, the mold-ripened of bacteria-ripened, the semi-hards and very hard kinds. Americans can now reproduce every known kind of cheese, although many of them, such as Roquefort, are confined largely to their native communities. The average American consumes about four and a half pounds of cheese yearly, according to government statisticians.

Ice cream, a purely American creation of dairy deliciousness, has become so popular that O. E. Reed, chief of the federal bureau of dairying, credits the ice cream industry with using six billion pounds of milk annually.

"Once regarded as a luxury," says Dr. Reed, "ice cream now holds a well established place in the American diet. There are about 4,000 ice cream factories in the United States today, using more dairy cattle output than the evaporated and condensed milk business, and as much as is used in cheese production.

"Back in the days when everybody kept a cow and mother churned the butter, baked the bread and did the canning and preserving, we made ice cream on the back porch in the hand freezer. Just as the making of butter, bread, and the canning of fruits have passed from home to factory so has the manufacture of ice cream. It is one of American's important industries today."

WATCH SCALES, GREIN ADVISES HOUSEWIVES

Every person responsible for any expenditure of the home will be interested in information which comes from the office of City Sealer Joe Grein. Mr. Grein says:

"A housewife should always ascertain the price of food per pound when making her purchases, then carefully watch the indicator on the scale, as it is a very common occurrence for a merchant to have salt pork pasted under the scale or possibly paper or other material which might make a difference in weight of 2 or 3 ounces."

Determines Tenderness of Canned Products.

Applying a "tooth test" to foods by machinery is one of the latest wrinkles developed by scientists to determine the tenderness and texture. Chemists of the United States department of agriculture have constructed a machine that makes determinations on canned fruits and vegetables.

Officials of the federal food and drug administration will use this new instrument to determine whether canned vegetables and fruits conform in tenderness and texture qualities established by the federal food law. It measures the force necessary to crush a pea or puncture a fruit, and enables one to compare the resistance with that of a standard sample. Repeatedly this instrument has rendered the same judgment as have expert graders.

The inventors, Victor B. Bonney, Paul A. Clifford, and Henry A. Lepper, designed the instrument so that it would apply the pressure in identically the same way to all samples of a given product.

The operator pours a stream of mercury into a flask at the top of a vertical plunger, thus increasing the weight until the plunger crushes or punctures the sample beneath. A gauge records the movement of the plunger and sounds a buzzer when the sample has been properly tested. The weight of the mercury shows the pressure necessary to crush or pierce the sample and gives a comparison of its tenderness with that of the standard.

Chicago Grocers Will Attend U. S. Conventions

Wholesale and retail grocers of Chicago indicate they will be well represented in numbers in two conventions scheduled soon. The American Wholesale Grocers' association will be held in New Orleans from May 12 to 14. The National Retail Grocers' association will meet in Milwaukee from July 6 to 9.

LAUNCH INQUIRY INTO THE WHOLESALE AND RETAIL EGG PRICES

Retail prices of fresh eggs may be cheaper than a year ago and far below the level of several years at this season of the year, but an investigation is being conducted to determine what causes the spread between the farm price, which in some sections is said to be around 12 cents a dozen, and the wholesaler's price to the retail merchant.

"There is too big a spread between the farm price and the retail price," is the assertion of J. A. Kotal, secretary of the National Retail Meat Dealers' association, which has its headquarters in Chicago.

"We are sending out representatives to determine what prices are being paid to farmers. Facts will be obtained in areas between Chicago and Detroit, Kansas City, and Cairo where this spread of prices is being made."

Mr. Kotal is of the opinion that the farmer either is not receiving a sufficient price for eggs, or that the housewife is being asked to pay too much in the store. But he reports that retailers are able to show that they pay within a slight margin of the retail price when they purchase their supplies from wholesalers.

Mr. Kotal recently made a trip into several rural communities. He reports he found wives of farmers selling eggs for one cent apiece and that they were surprised at a voluntary offer of 15 cents a dozen.

Now polish silverware without rubbing

BY MARY LEE WORN

A new quick way to CLEAN silver, to make two other jobs easy

There is now a simple new way that cleans silver without rubbing—and yet makes it look as if a professional silversmith had cleaned it! You don't even touch a cloth to it—just immerse it in a pan of water a few minutes. In this way, you clean all your table silver in an instant—clean a complete silver service just as quickly. It is a preparation called Climalene that you get for 10c a package (12-oz.) at any grocery store. Use according to directions below.

It makes many other hard jobs easier—removes bathtub ring without rubbing—cuts dishwashing time in half.

Thousands of women are using it now. It saves hours of work for them every day. Try it—these three ways.

To Clean Silver Without Rubbing

Add one teaspoonful of Climalene to 2 qts. of water in an aluminum pan. Immerse the silver—bring it to a boil. Then rinse silver and wipe it dry. That is all. All signs of tarnish disappear. Even the most intricate and highly embossed silver patterns are perfectly cleaned.

To Avoid Faded, Gray Washings

Use 2 tablespoonfuls of Climalene and ¼ the usual amount of soap. Clothes emerge soft spotless, utterly without fading. For soap fade and soap eat are ended this way. In recent tests, men's blue shirts were washed 75 times, without noticable fade; sheerest French hosiery 100 times and more—to prove the blandness of this way.

Banish Bathtub Ring

Add a tablespoonful of Climalene to your bath water. It makes the water soft as summer rain. Soap makes a quick, rich lather. After the bath—just rinse the tub. That is all. There just isn't any "high-water" mark. No scrubbing; no rubbing.

Why It Cleans

Climalene instantly takes all the hardness out of Lake water, medium hard water, and hard water. Makes it soft and gentle as rain water. So soft it does the work with ¼ the soap you now use. At the same time, due to certain blend cleansing agents, it instantly Dissolves all grease, dirt and grime, and thus cuts your working time ¼ or more, in washing, cleaning and in the dishpan.

CHECKERBOARD CAKE CALLS FOR ARTISTIC TOUCH

BY META GIVEN.

Mrs. A. G. R. wants us to describe in detail the making of a checkerboard cake. Two colors of dough are required to make this cake. One may mix up two different cakes whose colors and flavors are harmonious. Or one batter will suffice, dividing in halves, coloring one half and leaving the other as it is. A plain yellow and chocolate batter go well together. White will go with yellow and white with a faint pink. This is about the limit of attractive colors in cakes. Colors that are too pronounced and colors that one would never associate with cake are to be avoided if we would have a cake that is really attractive.

To the uninitiated the mystery about making this cake is in putting the batter in the pans to obtain the checked effect. This is best accomplished in round tins. The batter is put into the pans in concentric rings. For illustration, suppose we use a pink and white batter. Let us start by putting into the first pan in the exact center a circle of pink dough, around this a ring of white dough of even width and around this a ring of pink dough. One may make another ring if large pans are used, but three rings are about all that is possible in the tin of average diameter.

Reverse the Order.

In the second tin reverse the order of the colors. Begin the center with a circle of white dough, around this a ring of pink, and last a ring of white. If a three layer cake is being made and the best effect is obtained in three layers, the third pan may be arranged like the first pan.

Bake in the usual way and when cool put the layers together with a filling that will harmonize in color and flavor with the cake. But remember to place the layers together in such a manner that a pink ring comes over a white one, and vice versa. This is what gives the cake the checkered effect when it is cut.

Make Perfect Circles.

It is important that the rings of dough be of the same width. Some sort of device must be used to obtain an even width. I understand that such a device made of tin is on the market, but I have not been able to locate one. So far I have made my own forms for separating the dough. A clean, quite stiff manilla board, the kind that has a hard smooth surface, I find very satisfactory. Cut it into strips as wide as the depth of your pan, say 1¼ inches.

Curve these strips so as to make perfect circles and fasten them together with ordinary paper clips. Have the first circle about 3½ inches in diameter, the second one about 6½ inches. Lay these forms in the pan lined or oiled tin, being sure that they form perfect concentric circles. Then fill between these forms with cake dough in the order that we have suggested. Be sure that each kind of dough is on the same level. Carefully remove the pasteboard forms, leaving sharp lines of demarcation between the dough. The dough adhering to the cardboard may be scraped off clean with a spatula and put into the pans, but do not mix colors. Work as quickly as possible and do not handle the dough any more than is necessary, for overmanipulation spoils the texture of the best of cakes. Wipe the cardboard forms and quickly proceed to fill the other cake tins, remembering to reverse the order of the doughs. Bake in the usual way.

A checkerboard cake is most attractive if skill is used to secure harmonious colors and the dough is put into the pans neatly.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY SALAD.

On a bed of lettuce, or in a bowl lined with lettuce, place equal quantities of shredded celery hearts in two inch lengths and whites of hard boiled eggs mixed with a creamy mayonnaise. The celery and egg is to be seasoned before being mixed with the mayonnaise. The mayonnaise is to be mixed with lemon juice instead of vinegar and the top of the salad sprinkled with chopped yolks of hardboiled eggs.

BRAISED VEAL.

5 lbs veal	1 tbsp sliced onion
2 tbsp butter or other fat	1 tsp salt
6	Pepper

The breast, neck, shoulder, ends of ribs or knuckle may be used. Heat the fat and onion in a kettle. Season the veal with salt and pepper, put it into the kettle and sear it on all sides until brown. Pour over it the boiling water and cover tightly. Set the kettle in a slow oven [250 degrees F.] and bake for two and one-half hours. Serve either hot or cold. If served hot, make a thickened sauce of the liquor in the kettle. When cold, the gravy will form a jelly to serve with the cold meat.

PANS PREPARED FOR CHECKERBOARD CAKES

Here is the way to prepare cake pans for baking checkerboard cakes. The important thing to remember when baking in either square or round tins is to reverse the colors in the second layer. A quite stiff cardboard is used to make the forms which separate the colors of the dough.

And what a difference this makes! You see this difference in the clear gleam of the fruit—fine, big, golden circles without the slightest trace of the hard center core. You taste it in the sun-matured flavor.

Treat your family to SAVOY HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLE. It comes in sparkling circles; or crushed into dainty bits; or in delightful salad pieces.

PRUNES HAVE IT! CELERY HAS IT!

HEINZ RICE FLAKES HAVE IT, TOO

WE BORROWED NATURE'S WISE IDEA FOR THESE CRISP DELICIOUS FLAKES!

Just look at these golden-brown flakes. They're so crisp and crunchy—so deliciously sweet and downright good—you'd never suspect them of having a serious purpose in life! Yet they have.

Heinz Rice Flakes do the same important work that some fruits and vegetables do! Natural, corrective work—without harshness or irritation. Like prunes and celery, these delicious flakes have a gentle, mildly laxative effect—what is sometimes called a "corrective vegetable effect." No other rice flakes have this helpful regulatory quality!

It was Nature's wise idea. We simply borrowed it. We borrowed Nature's idea, too, when we made Heinz Rice Flakes taste so good. Nature doesn't approve of making foods "good-for-you," without making them good to eat, too. So we've made these crisp flakes just as delicious as other famous foods of the "57 Varieties." Taste them and see for yourself! . . .

Two generous trial packages—FREE!

Fill out the coupon and mail it to us, and we'll send you two generous trial packages of Heinz Rice Flakes—enough for six servings—free! Notice how crisp the little flakes stay, until you've eaten the last one in the bowl. Eat them and enjoy them, every day! Heinz Rice Flakes will do the rest.

If you like a scientific reason . . .

Heinz Rice Flakes not only furnish all the energy and body-building elements of rice, but they supply an essential substance found in no other rice flakes. This substance is cereal-cellulose—one of the gentlest, mildest correctives known to man—a corrective with absolutely no harsh or irritating effects.

H. J. Heinz Company spent eight years in perfecting the exclusive process by which cereal-cellulose is added to crisp, delicious flakes. It costs much more to make Heinz Rice Flakes this way. But it costs you no more.

Bach's Music Is Well Sung by Chicago Chorus

BY EDWARD MOORE.

THE ideals, the zealous ambitions, the accomplishments of the Chicago Bach chorus were never better illustrated than in the concert at Orchestra hall last night, the final of the season. Making use only of the works of the great composer whose name the chorus bears, they performed the Magnificat and five cantatas, solo and choral, with the prelude to "Actus Tragicus" as an intervening orchestral number.

The members of the chorus sing Bach as the director, Dr. Sigfrid Prager, conducts him, with evident admiration and affection that inspires them to learn the music thoroughly and perform it both ardently and with respect. The same sort of feeling sounded in the voices of the soloists, and the solos and trio of the Magnificat were particularly striking for this reason. The soloists were Frances Haeger, Philipine Hennig Rohrman, Edwin Kemp, and Mark Love. Members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra played the instrumental score with Edwin Stanley Seder at the organ and Marie Stange at the piano.

Meanwhile the Canori club, a pleasantly singing male chorus, appeared at Kimball hall under the direction of Richard F. Stiller. Most of the program consisted of part-songs which were done discreetly and gracefully, with due attention to projecting the texts as well as the melodies. Lucille Long, contralto, guest artist of the evening, was heard to good effect in a group of songs by Chicago composers, and was encored.

Hard Times Hit Even the Children, Parents Explain

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Would you be surprised if I should tell you that the serious business depression which has affected the whole country is increasing child behavior problems? It seems a far cry from one to the other, doesn't it? And yet parents' letters are beginning to describe behavior problems which are directly traceable to the depression and unemployment. Let me tell you how it is.

A man loses his job, or has to take a cut in salary or wages. He uses up his savings and still things get no better. Finally, he and his wife and children go to live with her people, or his people.

No longer do the parents have a free hand in managing the children. Suggestions, interference, criticism, nagging, arguments, follow—nerves get edgy and the children begin to sprout all sorts of trying ways. One mother writes despairingly at the end of her letter, "Do you think we should try to live by ourselves and starve?"

That's pretty bad—when you feel as desperate as that. There is a tragic amount of undernourishment and other consequences to children from these business conditions, and at present it is not preventable. But that children's training should be spoiled, their home atmosphere of peace and happiness destroyed just because families have to join forces is partly avoidable.

Of course, we have to admit that it's hard many times for older people to have their quiet invaded by children—though, happily, many others love it. Sometimes it's a matter of disposition and health—though we do know that. There are some people who grow old sweetly and some who sour with age.

The fact of the matter is, however, that these consolidations of families are usually hard on all concerned. And what people need to carry them through is forbearance. What these grownups need, both generations of them, is to rise to the situation instead of picking and faultfinding and having hurt feelings. There are many grandparents who will have to learn to withhold criticism and many parents who will have to learn to accept suggestions during these hard times, if there is to be any peace, at all.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Criticized Teacher's Poem.

In our poetry class in high school once a week our teacher read us various poems—good, bad and indifferent. We were to volunteer our opinions with our reasons for the criticism. One day she read a poem which I thought especially poor in form, material and rhythm. After she had read the verse I promptly raised my hand and told the class in general how bad I thought it really was.

"Thank you," said the instructor, when I had finished. "I am very glad to know, because I wrote it."

Frock Material Used for Gloves

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Gloves made of the same fabric as the frock are the smartest thing in Paris this spring. Talbot is making gloves in silk or wool or cotton mesh to match her daytime frocks and satin or crêpe de chine gloves for her afternoon and evening gowns. Lace, net, chiffon and georgette gloves accompany matching frocks chez many of the leading Paris couturiers.

Matching mitts are also legion, being specially featured by Ardanse and Martial et Armand.

Lanvin is making quite a point of gloves that match her frocks. Her favorite glove shape is a slipon, reaching nearly to the elbows, cut with a swashbuckling, cavalier flare, and often these dashing gloves lend zip to very simple gowns.

This type of "evening glove ensemble" is sketched today. Lanvin makes the tailored frock of celestial blue crêpe satin. The ankle length skirt is box plaited all round. The bodice is given a sleeved effect by shoulder berthas cut in one with the front that allow the upper arms to peep through oval openings. This unusual bertha is lined with silver lamé. A belt of the blue crêpe satin buckles in back with a strasse and silver buckle.

The gloves of the blue crêpe satin flare widely toward the top. They are open in a curve on the outside, half way to the wrist. They're lined with silver lamé, like the bertha.

Child Conference Idea Spreads Rapidly, Report Given Hoover

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—The work of the White House conference on child health and protection is rapidly being extended through state, county and city organizations.

Dr. H. E. Barnard, director of the conference, has reported to President Hoover that Indiana, Georgia, New Jersey, Utah, New Hampshire, and Florida already have held state conferences under the direct leadership of the governor and commissioners of health, education and welfare.

"The meetings were enthusiastic," Barnard reported, "and resulted in the organization of plans to carry out the White House conference aims and principles according to local conditions and needs."

In addition, he said, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Louisiana, Colorado, Wyoming, and Oregon are developing programs in preparation for similar statewide conferences next fall.

He's Jealous, Yet Won't Pop Question, Writes This Girl

BY DORIS BLAKE.

According to the books a girl shouldn't want a man to be jealous of her, nor is jealousy "scientifically" analyzed as a proof of love. BUT I'm afraid a girl likes it, rather, when a man blows up over attentions from some other man. And I've more than a sneaking suspicion that jealousy has one of its roots, anyway, in love.

We certainly do not get jealous, any of us, over a person we are disinterested in. You've got to care about some one—and care a good deal, too, before his or her attentions to or from some one else start the old pangs going. Or, unless possibly, you happen to be one born with a jealous nature, showing jealousy toward possessions other people have, or success they enjoy. Some people have just such uncontrolled natures that everything every one else has or does is a red rag.

Students of the green-eyed monster and his ways ascribe inferiority complexes to this class of jealous person. But I've known them to be among the most confirmed egotists imaginable. I suppose if it were easier to get at all of the jealousy reasons there'd be much less jealousy in the world. It could be weeded out more skilfully. But jealousy got its name as a monster because so often you don't know to what to ascribe the darned thing. Folk without it certainly are among the most blessed mortals.

"Jean B." reports a young man insanely jealous if he hears of or sees her out with another man. Yet, he isn't there with a proposal, and "Jean B." being nothing if not an opportunist, sees no point in conceding priority right to one, insanely jealous though he may be, who withholds the wedding suggestion.

Right she is, too. That's pure spoilbaby stuff to want what the other fellow has just because he appears to have it. That kind of jealousy isn't dignified enough to be considered as anything but what we've just named it.

Betraying as feminine fact, I'm afraid most women do get a "glow" out of a loved one's objections to other men hovering about. It's probably just our quaint way of believing we must be loved or our man wouldn't be disturbed.

Munich Dedicates Bust of Edison in Hall of Fame

MUNICH, Bavaria, May 7.—(AP)—A marble bust of Thomas A. Edison was unveiled today in the Deutsche Museum Hall of Fame beside that of Werner von Siemens, Germany's electrical pioneer.

H. H. Barnes, New York engineer, attended for the Edison Pioneers' society and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers who together donated the bust.

Oscar von Miller, curator of the museum, recalled his first contact with Edison's work when he attended the Paris exposition fifty years ago and suddenly the big hall was flooded with light from the new incandescent lamp. Two years later he met the inventor and persuaded him to come to Germany. Since then they have been close friends.

Beauty Contest Judge Has Hard Job These Days

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Accepting an invitation to act as a judge in a beauty contest is one of the things that should be done with fear and trepidation—and a pair of fast running heels for use immediately after your decision.

In fact, Channing Pollock, the playwright, and one of several of us recently invited to decide the fairest in a neighborhood church group contest, announced he would present the cup only on condition he could make a hasty side door exit. It was said humorously, of course. But I still maintain that it's a job that calls for courage.

Now, the reason for this is not as flippant as the foregoing might hint. Every human being constitutes himself and herself a good judge of beauty. And who is to say that your neighbor on the right isn't just as good a judge as you?

Third, and this is the point of my introducing the subject of the beauty contest in which I was a recent judge, girls are so universally smart and good looking that it is a job, indeed, to concentrate on a single preferred one. Take, as in the particular instance I speak of, a group of girls from a good neighborhood, and the high percentage of good looks is impressive. As one of the judges asked: "Isn't it striking how uniformly well dressed this group is?"

Of more interest to me, however, is the high standard of hair, skin, teeth, and silhouette beauty. Surely, it may be said that at no period in our history has feminine beauty become so accessible an asset to every young American girl, as we of today are in a position to witness.

This was no bathing suit contest, but a nice, dignified affair, with the entrants in evening frocks. The object of its sponsoring by a neighborhood group of churches was to prove that one (young men particularly) did not have to haunt night clubs and dance halls for good looking girls, a contention proved beyond a doubt.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

A. P.: COLD CREAMS DO NOT IN any way encourage the growth of hair when applied and left on during the night. Superfluous hair is due to a peculiarity of the structure of the skin, not to the use of creams, lotions, etc.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

LIFE SPAN OF TREES.

It's wrong to measure the age of a tree and call it old at 90 or 100 years, says Dr. E. Porter Felt, editor of the American Journal of Economic Entomology. In his opinion trees can be expected reasonably to live to 200 years or even 500 years if they are given proper care.

Considerable attention is being directed to the program of the American Tree association, which is coöperating in the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of George Washington. A tree planting project designed to beautify roadsides and parks for many years to come is one of the features of the bicentennial.

As the value of a tree increases with age, recommendations are being made throughout the United States that tree care be encouraged. The millions of moderately old trees spread over scenic spots of this country should receive the care that will enable them to live to be stately monarchs, Dr. Felt advises.

Deficient moisture, limited feeding areas for roots, poor soil aeration, insufficient sunlight, and injuries from repeated depredations by insects or destructive fungi are said to be common causes for premature infirmities.

"Dying branches should not be considered as natural and inevitable, but should be taken as a warning that the trees require care. Washington, as a planter of trees, would approve of planting programs, but would also want trees given proper care," says Dr. Felt.

When You CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, for it insures your comfort. Freedom from those pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block that threatening headache while it is still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you've caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home and keep some at the office. Like an efficient secretary, it will often "save the day" and spare you many uncomfortable, unproductive hours. Perfectly harmless, so keep it handy, keep it in mind, and use it. No man of affairs can afford to ignore the score and more of uses explained in the proven directions. From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains which seem almost to bend the bones, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and always werks. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. They are of perfect purity, absolute uniformity, and have the same action every time. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

Fayro Makes the Seemingly Impossible Come True

Does it seem impossible to you that you could go back to the girlish figure fashion demands? That you could take off pounds almost at will . . . and immediately, without the torture of starvation diet or exhausting over exercise? Fayro does just that. More than a million and a half packages of Fayro have been purchased on an absolute money back guarantee if you are dissatisfied for any reason, and hundreds of grateful letters testify to its success. We offer you a chance to prove it for yourself without risking a penny. We guarantee to you immediate results, without effort on your part . . . or your money will be refunded without question. Best of all the Fayro treatment is pleasant and absolutely harmless.

Read what Fayro has done for these women

One enthusiastic user of Fayro writes, "Three Fayro Baths reduced my weight 11 pounds in 8 days. I feel better than I have felt for years." "I weigh 16 pounds less and feel younger and sleep better. Fayro is wonderful," writes another. A third says, "Thank you for Fayro. I lost 14 pounds in three weeks; feel better and certainly look better." These are samples of hundreds of letters we have received without any solicitation whatever. *Every letter we have ever published is on file and may be examined by any responsible person.

Fayro is Not a New Product

Fayro has been on sale at the best drug stores in the United States for more than 10 years. Its continuous and growing popularity speaks for its success. But before Fayro was heard of society men and women had been flocking for centuries to hot springs in America and all over the world in search of health. An analysis of the water from these springs reveals the fact that basically the formulae are much alike. All contained various salts, various forms of magnesia, sodium, etc., etc. The formula for Fayro when dissolved in hot water duplicates the most effective chemical elements of these hot spring baths in a form which gives you the opportunity to secure the same or better results in the privacy of your own home . . . without any one even knowing it.

Reduce by "Duct-Activity"

Fayro is a pleasant aromatic powder which you simply pour into your hot bath. Then relax for twenty minutes. In that time you will lose two to four pounds and up. By its peculiar, pleasing action it will stimulate the lazy sweat ducts to activity. Surplus fats and body poisons will be thrown off. You will literally "feel" the fat disappear, without rubbing or exercise, just by sitting in your tub, and you will step out refreshed, spirited, buoyant. Your skin will be clearer, smoother and healthier. Your friends will notice the difference, but will not know, unless you choose to tell, how it was done. Do not confuse Fayro with any internal medicine or any so-called reducing treatment. Fayro is unique. Try it tonight at our risk. Remember your money will be refunded if you are dissatisfied for any reason.

At Walgreen's, and Economical Drug Stores, and at all drug and toilet counters everywhere.

FAYRO

*Write for copy of sworn statement before Notary Public that no testimonial for Fayro has ever been solicited or paid for in any way. Fayro, Inc., North Side, Pittsburgh.

Young Meeker Writes Another, Brighter Book

It's Called Better than His "American Beauty."

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"HER friends were flat, two-dimensional paper dolls in the sophisticated playground she had called the world. Nothing she did or failed to do could honestly matter to them. It was not their fault. The life they led had robbed them of all capacity for feeling. At the first breath of reality they toppled over helplessly, like paper dolls in a draught."

Thus the heroine of "Strange Capers" looks with very seeing eyes upon her friends. And thus, subtly, the author of "Strange Capers" looks upon his characters. And with a consistency and an almost diabolical skill he sets down all of the futile, silly fluttering's of these paper dolls.

Arthur Meeker Jr. wrote a novel called "American Beauty" a couple of years ago that was devilishly clever and which had most of the qualities of a brilliant satirical novel, except the quality of seeing life as pathetic as well as ironic. There was a hard, youthful brilliancy about "American Beauty." It was caricature of the first water, but there was something a little cold about it.

"Strange Capers" has all of the arresting, amusing, gay qualities of "American Beauty" and a new and sophisticated undercurrent of pathos. Not that, even for a moment, it comes to the surface. Never is the rollicking stream of the tale anything but a rivulet upon which paper dolls in a paper ship are fluttering. "Strange Capers" is even more of a caricature than "American Beauty" of types, all fictious, all bent on the selfish pursuit of frivolity and fun. To be serious for a moment would be, to the characters in "Strange Capers," to be completely outside the pale of what is done.

But in two of the characters love happens and the author sees them suddenly transformed from flat, two dimensional paper dolls to characters full to the round of real emotion. He does a brilliant job of that love affair. In it are all of the sex antagonism and sex attraction of two uncouth human beings. Only when they are silent are they happy, the heroine concludes to herself.

This rather solemn beginning of a review may sound as if "Strange Capers" were a solemn book. It is the least solemn novel I have read in months, and the most amusing. It has the quality of a ripping good farce both in action and in writing. It speeds along from one screamingly funny scene to another, all of them set down with a rare and almost cruel sense of insight into the characters' queernesses and their reactions. There is no "psychology" in it at all, and for the excellent reason that paper dolls don't have psychology. And it is written with real brilliance.

It starts with the receipt by two cousins of the news that their uncle, who was tremendously rich and who gave them bountiful allowances, has died, leaving all of his money to his nephews. One of the cousins, the heroine, has gone in for the "arty" French-American international group. She always is au courant with the last ash of a brush, the novel of day after tomorrow, the play of the day after that. She knows only the most exclusive of the ultra-exclusive art crowd. The mistress who has inherited millions of francs from her uncle is an American singer at the Opera Comique who yearns to return to America in a triumph which a young American jazz artist is writing. He, however, shows signs of turning over the leading rôle to another prima donna because she once spent a weekend with the Masterlincks and he wants to know the "intellectuals." The heroine proposes to the "art girl" that for a matter of $10,000 to each of the cousins, the leader of intellectual society provide her with a group of friends after the manner of the well known social backers. It's the most amusing idea imaginable, and the author makes the very best of a bizarre situation. There is assembled a houseparty in Salzburg that is side-splitting. And what happens then is three-fourths of a book that is my idea of one of the funniest and best satires I've ever read about the fritterers.

My secretary read "Strange Capers" and said she didn't know there were people like that in the world—were people like that in the world—spongers and wasters and fourflushers and posers and the flatly hedonistic who live luxury because it is luxury. That's one thing that makes the book so amusing. If they were the sort of people we know and are friends with, it probably wouldn't seem funny to us at all. But they do exist, and it takes a gifted pen to impale them for us.

Men and women crowded the new home of Hull House shop on its opening day yesterday in Diana court of the Michigan Square building, Michigan avenue and Ohio street, to view the arts and crafts of the oldest social settlement in Chicago. They heard Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull house since its founding, tell of the remarkable progress in art made by the settlement's students.

"Many a gifted person, never having a chance to express the art of which he is capable, becomes inhibited, maladjusted, a disturber in the community," Miss Addams said. "We at Hull house are trying to find the child who needs this chance. By working together in arts and crafts they reveal themselves to each other, are proud of the arts and crafts of their parents from the older countries and help to make in this country a culture we could get in no other way. I hope the time will come when Hull house will be a service to this polyglot city of ours."

Miss Addams told how the first effort of bringing art to Hull house was the borrowing of good paintings from leading citizens. Later the Chicago Art institute was opened on Sundays and the galleries transferred there. Next was organized an Arts and Crafts society out of which grew metal work and book binding, varieties of spinning, batik, pottery, painting and other arts.

Paintings by Leon Garland and Sadie Ellis Garland, art instructors at Hull house are on exhibition in the Diana court salon as are the work of young pupils of the Hull house art school in painting, textiles and pottery in the Walden Bookshop. The new shop is a nonprofit institution. Demonstrations of pottery making and weaving will be given from time to time in the shop by Mexican workers. A series of lectures by authorities on arts and crafts will be given on Thursday afternoons.

Carry Lilacs to Cheer Those in Hospitals

May 15 and 16 Set for Distribution.

Lilac time, an institution designed to spread spring cheer among the hospital population of Chicago and to introduce the fragrance of flowering lilacs through the poor districts, is scheduled this year for Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16. It is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE with the coöperation of the Chicago Plant, Flower and Fruit guild.

With the setting of the date the third annual invitation is extended to those with an abundance of lilacs as well as other spring flowers to cut and carry them to the five receiving stations. From there they will be distributed to 25 institutions and to other flowerless sections of Chicagoland.

The receiving stations, to be open Friday and Saturday morning of next week, will be in the Randolph street station of the Illinois Central railroad, the Chicago and North Western station, the Union station, the La Salle street station, and the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin station. In addition to commuters it has been suggested by the guild members that suburban residents driving autos can bring their flowers to any of the five receiving depots on those two days.

Some of the first lilacs of the season near Chicago are at the suburban home of Dr. Frank Johnson, village forester of Glen Ellyn, where one shrub has blossomed. Cool weather the last two weeks has delayed the lilacs and other spring flowers, so that the dates for Lilac Time fall during the Chicago Jubilee.

Seventy-six garden clubs in the metropolitan area are coöperating with the guild, promising both flowers and aid in distributing them, according to T. V. Purcell, president of the guild.

Chairmen for the various divisions of distribution include Mrs. F. W. Kingsley, Evanston; Mrs. Rolden Dressler, Wheaton; Mrs. F. A. Record, Barrington; Mrs. T. E. Moritz, Kenilworth; Mrs. H. E. Wulfing, Beverly Hills; Mrs. B. B. Cooley, Libertyville; Mrs. George Dyche, Wheaton, and Mrs. Dean M. Workman, La Grange.

Mrs. Charles G. Dawes is honorary president. Vice presidents include Miss Jane Addams, Arthur T. Aldis, Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Walter Brewster, J. H. Burdett, Mrs. J. G. Coleman, Mrs. George Fabyan, Mrs. Robert Hamill, Mrs. Edward N. Hurley, Mrs. John D. Hertz, Jens Jensen, Edwin T. Johnson, D. F. Kelly, Mrs. John Lind, Mrs. Will H. Lyford, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Miss Mary McDowell, Joy Morton, Mrs. James A. Patten, Col. William Nelson Pelouze, Mrs. J. Harry Selz, Mrs. Gabriel Slaughter, R. Douglas Stuart, Graham Taylor, Leonard Vaughan, and Mrs. W. L. Karcher.

Mrs. Robert R. McCormick is chairman of the executive committee, and Mrs. Walter S. Underwood is corresponding secretary. Expressions of praise for the work of flower distribution, which will continue through the summer, are coming as they have in other years from the institutions where the flowers are distributed.

Lady Astor Says Women Pick Strange Lecturers

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—Lady Astor told the American Women's club today that what surprised her most about women's clubs in America was the kind of people they invite from Europe to address them.

"There have been young men not yet out of college, aggressive in manner and with no sympathy for woman's position, who have been invited to address women's club in the United States," she said.

"American women are doing nothing to further the cause of women in the world if they continue to invite this kind of upstart."

Chaplin Is True to Movies Even When King Calls to Stage

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—The London Evening Standard, publishing a purported interview with Charlie Chaplin tonight, said Chaplin had declined to appear on the stage at a "command" vaudeville performance which may be attended by the king and queen.

Stating it had discussed the invitation with Chaplin at Juan les Pins, France, the newspaper quoted the motion picture star as saying "it would be bad taste" for him to appear on the stage.

The "command" performances, which are held annually, are selected from the élite of vaudeville talent in the British isles and most of the artists selected regard the opportunity as a feather in their caps.

"I don't appear in public that way," the newspaper quoted Chaplin as saying. "The last thing in the world I want to do is make stage appearances."

The newspaper said Chaplin was sending a check instead.

C. M. Lockwood Views Civil War Graves.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—Charles Morey Lockwood, 88 years old, last man of the Last Man's club, today viewed Washington for all his departed comrades of Company B, 1st Minnesota, and got as much kick out of it as he claimed for his little bottle of last man's wine.

"When we camped behind the capitol in '61," was the phrase oftenest on his lips as he reminisced for the thirty-three whom he survived in that famous compact concluded July 21, 1930.

Lockwood arrived this morning, carrying in his inside coat pocket a small bottle of the wine which occasioned organization of the Last Man's club in 1884.

Lincoln memorial, Arlington cemetery, State, War, and Navy building were scenes of his wanderings today, and his keen eye spotted every civil war memento.

To Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, he paid a soldier's respects, his G. A. R. button and his insignia of his company prominently displayed. But the photos of Sherman and of Sheridan on the general's wall he hailed as old friends.

As for Abraham Lincoln, he paused before he even approached the white marble memorial on the Potomac across from Arlington.

"I remember the first time I saw Abe Lincoln," he said. "It was on Arlington heights—a grand review. He sat on a fine black horse with his plug hat set back like this—"

Lockwood pushed back his gray cap illustratively.

A few steps up the fifty-seven to the Lincoln shrine, Lockwood's keen eyes spotted inscriptions—"The name and date of every state!" he exclaimed. "I'd like to see where South Dakota is. It's been my home since it was a territory."

Then, as he first glimpsed the central figure of the shrine—"That's a grand monument of Lincoln. Just as natural as can be. He didn't look as old as that in '61. But he had that careworn look.

"I saw him three or four times while we were camped around here. He was always kind to all the soldiers and glad to see them."

All Lockwood's recollections were dated by the first battle of Bull Run, the anniversary Company B chose to celebrate each year.

J. S. Rockefeller and Paula Watjen, Berlin, Marry in New York

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Miss Paula Watjen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Watjen of Bremen and Berlin, Germany, was married today to John Sterling Rockefeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, grandson of the late William Rockefeller, and grand-nephew of John D. Rockefeller.

Their marriage took place in the Byzantine chapel of St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal church, with the Rev. Arthur R. Kinsolving II., chaplain of the United States Military academy, officiating.

The bride was escorted by her father to the chancel steps where she was joined by the bridegroom and Edward S. Sturges II., the bridegroom's classmate at Yale, who attended him.

Mr. Rockefeller and his bride will said tomorrow night for a three months' wedding trip to Europe. Mr. Rockefeller, a graduate of Yale, is connected with the Chatham-Phenix National Bank and Trust company.

The guests were restricted to relatives and close friends. His mother, Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Watjen, parents of the bride, were present.

THE STAGE

A COMEDY called "Ritzy" will be presented at the Selwyn theater June 20 for a summer run if the hopes of Lester Bryant and George Miller come true. This play, written by Viva Tattersall and Sidney Toler [the actor], was staged in New York last season by L. Lawrence Weber, and had a four weeks' run at the Longacre theater, with Ernest Truex and Miriam Hopkins heading the cast. Messrs. Miller and Bryant think that "Ritzy" will suit the taste of Chicago's summer playgoers, and are preparing a production. Leading rôles will be played by Edna Hibbard, Lynne Overman, and James Spottswood.

All of which recalls "Sisters of the Chorus," the only play that kept the drama from becoming extinct in Chicago last summer. Lester Bryant staged it, and Edna Hibbard [his wife] acted its heroine.

Another summer prospect is "Ladies All," by Antoine Bibescu, adapted by Elmer Harris. Gregory Ratoff and Ben Bernie, sponsors of the impending "Oh, Promise Me," are seriously thinking about staging this play in Chicago in June. Walter Woolf will probably have his original rôle, if the plan materializes, and Elise Bartlett may become the successor to Violet Heming.

"Alison's House," the play by Susan Glaspell that won the Pulitzer prize as the best American work of the theatrical year, is about to enter Broadway competition. Lee Shubert has signed a contract with Eva Le Gallienne, and her Civic Repertory company for an engagement at the Ritz theater, New York, beginning next Monday.

Miss Le Gallienne accepted this offer because her repertory season is closing and she is about to take a year's vacation. The premiated play thus has an opportunity to reach the general playgoing public of New York. Miss Le Gallienne will withdraw from the leading rôle after a week's performances, but her company, headed by an actress not yet announced, will continue in "Alison's House" for the duration of the run. Under the terms of the agreement with Mr. Shubert the play may be presented on tour in the cities of the Shubert subscription drama plan, including Chicago.

The "Third Little Show," with Beatrice Lillie and Ernest Truex as stars, began its career in New Haven, Conn., last Monday night. A fortnight's engagement in Boston will start next week. The New York première is scheduled for May 26.

The Harris theater, usually not in operation on Sunday nights, announces Sabbath performances during the run of "The Greeks Had a Word for It." The Wednesday matinée will be omitted.

The truthful box office men at the Blackstone theater announce that five hundred women exhibited moles and got free admission at last Wednesday afternoon's performance of "That's Gratitude." The great mole or beauty spot matinée, in honor of Myrtle Clark, the heroine of the play, was declared to have been a complete success. Thomas W. Ross, veteran of many long Chicago runs, goes into the cast next Monday to replace Allan Dinehart, who will follow the siren song of the film magnates. C. C.

America Gives This Sunday to the Mothers

Idea from Philadelphia Affects World.

Had it not been for the penning of a note by a Philadelphia woman twenty-four years ago, next Sunday night might never have been dedicated to "the best mother that ever lived—your mother."

Sons and daughters the world over will heap at the feet of their mothers tributes of flowers and messages and gifts, happy because one day in the year has been set aside by proclamation for the adulation of motherhood. But the thoughts of Miss Anna Jarvis will return on Mother's day to that occasion when she hailed an invitation to a friend to spend the second Sunday of May in the Jarvis home to commemorate the death of Miss Jarvis' mother, Mrs. Granville E. Jarvis.

From this meeting there evolved the next year, May 10, 1908, according to TRIBUNE files, the celebration of Mother's day in Philadelphia churches and homes. During the intervening year letters had been mailed by Miss Jarvis to senators, judges, professors, schools, business leaders, philanthropists. The little lady even braved the ridicule of the United States senate with a resolution designating the second Sunday in May a national holiday dedicated to mother.

When Senator Burkett of Nebraska read the resolution, it is recorded, his fellow lawmakers greeted it with derision:

"I have a dear old aunt," yelled one. "Let's have an Auntie's day!"

But the Nebraska senator talked on in compelling earnestness, and claimed the ears of the press, if not the senate [until a later date]. The next day, the story goes, thousands of men and women wore to church the white carnation, symbolic of mother-love, after learning of Miss Jarvis' plan.

Like prairie wild fire the universal appeal of Mother's day spread. The fourth celebration was noted for its observance in 45 states, Porto Rico and Hawaii. The next year England and Ireland followed suit, with interest also awakened in Switzerland and Germany.

By 1916 Chicago was having a Grandmother's choir in St. Paul's Methodist church on Mother's day, and sermons in the churches throughout the city were dedicated to "Mother" or "Motherhood." During the war, no more fervent celebration of Mother's day was observed anywhere in the world than in France by the American soldiers.

Among these was a program on May 12, 1918, given by the Thirteenth railway engineers, the first unit to leave Chicago for the other side. It included a patriotic overture, hymns, an address on the origin and meaning of Mother's day, mother songs, and an address by the Hon. William G. Sharp, ambassador to France.

In late years services dedicated to famous mothers vary the usual public celebrations in different parts of the country. Pilgrimages are made to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington. In 1927 Mother's day was commemorated at Lincoln City, Ind., to Nancy Hanks Lincoln, mother of Abraham Lincoln.

In Mexico last year efforts were made to find Mexico's most prolific mother so she might be crowned "mother queen of Mexico," on Mother's day. A few days previous to the event, twenty-two mother queens of states had been selected for the contest, having a total of 319 children, an average of 16 each.

So universal is the individual observance of Mother's day that Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder announced that gifts and greetings should be in the mails by May 9 to reach their destinations in time. Everything mailed after that day, he said, should bear a special delivery stamp. The volume of Mother's day mail is already larger than last year.

WAR STILL LINGERS FOR VETERANS IN VARIOUS HOSPITALS

A program observing National Hospital day which 20,000 are expected to attend, is planned for Sunday at Edward Hines Jr. hospital. It will be the eleventh annual observance of Hospital day commemorating the birth of Florence Nightingale, founder of organized nursing.

"With thousands of visitors in town for the Chicago Jubilee I expect the largest crowd ever to enter the hospital grounds," Col. Hugh Scott, manager of the hospital, said yesterday. "Many visitors here for the Jubilee will visit relatives and friends and inspect the largest veterans' hospital in the country."

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, will be the principal speaker. Among other speakers will be Howard P. Savage, past national commander of the American Legion. Bill Wilson will be grand marshall of the drum and bugle corps parade, and a band concert will open the afternoon's activities at 1 o'clock. Guides will conduct groups through the hospital.

The officials request that no food be brought to the hospital, but instead a red geranium, designated as the Hospital day flower.

REUNION OF BRITISH PROTESTANTS SOUGHT BY ANGLICAN PRIMATE

WALLASEY, Cheshire, England, May 7.—(AP)—A gesture seeking reconvocation of the Lambeth conference with a view to discussing union of the Church of England with evangelical free churches has been made by the archbishop of Canterbury in a letter to the federal council of the evangelicals.

The letter was submitted to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of England, which voted to give the Presbyterian representatives on the federal council a free hand in voting.

The archbishop wrote that since the last conference many misunderstandings remained to be cleared and that additional explanations might be made.

"It is a most earnest hope that the council's September meeting will resume conversations so that further steps may be taken toward fuller understanding and fuller spiritual cooperation or, if it is God's will, toward even closer union."

SYNOPSIS.

Iris de Bertincourt lives in a remote section of Paris with her fifteen year old daughter, Clare. She and Maj. Alan Charnwood are desperately in love, but there are barriers to their immediate marriage. They are spending the last evening they will have together in several months, as Maj. Charnwood plans to leave the next day for Africa. Clare is acting in a school play and is to be brought home by friends.

Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel de Bertincourt, a man of enormous charm but utterly lacking in moral sense. Iris and he are cousins and the possible heirs of their Aunt Victoire, the Comtesse de Caselmauron. Iris plans to divorce her husband and marry Alan when he returns, but she is keeping her plans secret, as she wishes to avoid the interference of her tyrannical aunt, who has until recently ruled her life.

Iris receives a message that her aunt is on her way to see her. Alan leaves. The comtesse tells Iris that her husband's character has wholly changed and that he is desirous of reassuming his duties as a husband and father. Just after the comtesse leaves Iris hears a motor stop in front of the house and hears Clare's friends bidding her good night, but when she opens the door Clare is nowhere to be seen.

Maj. Charnwood is just ready to leave his hotel when Iris calls him. He hurries to her home. The friends who drove Clare home tell Iris they left Clare at her door. Alan accompanies Iris to notify the police, then they wait all night; but day breaks and Clare is still away. An inspector assigned to the case calls. He finds a photograph of a handsome Latin youth in Clare's desk. Iris calls her aunt, and Alan leaves to call on Helen Roderick, the American woman in whose office Iris has been employed. Miss Roderick refers to Clare's father as though she knows him well. She says she has known Marcel for several months and that he's not as black as he's painted. She hasn't told Iris, as she didn't want to risk losing her friendship. When Alan returns to Iris' home he finds it closed. The maid tells him that Iris has gone to her aunt's. He tries unsuccessfully to see her there. The comtesse sees him, however, and dismisses him coolly. As he leaves the house an old servant approaches him with a message.

INSTALLMENT XVII.

WILLFUL DECEPTION.

There was something ironical in finding herself installed once more in the small suite which for endless cramped years had bounded her existence. Iris could almost have believed she had slipped back into the past, like creeping into an abandoned shell.

The unchanged decorations assisted the illusion. Here was the same robin's egg blue paneling, the same Louis Philippe furniture, the chintzes patterned closely with large eyed birds and stiff meadow flowers. She had but to shut her eyes to see the little Clare herself perched on the stool beside the bed, cheeks pink with joyous excitement, or sitting cross-legged on the sofa by the window, cutting out smartly dressed ladies from a copy of Femina. There she was now, real, so real! The long lock of hair kept falling into her eyes, she brushed it back impatiently and, looking up, displayed startlingly those gray violet eyes so strangely like her father's.

The vision smote Iris cruelly. She dug her fingers into her own dry eyes to chase it away.

Up till now no thought of her husband had entered her mind, nor had she troubled to mention him to the comtesse. Really it was of little consequence how the child's disappearance might affect a man so completely detached from family ties. That the recent occurrence could serve to bring her into contact with him was a possibility she did not stop to consider. However, she was soon to suffer a rude awakening.

It was late Wednesday afternoon. She had come in from her usual

"Must you go, Iris? Am I so abhorrent to you?"

excursion, confused with the sordid districts through which she had passed—Montmartre, Les Batignolles, La Villette, and the outlying suburbs of Le Pantin and Pré St. Gervais—the teeming tenements, clanging trams, the undersized human beings hurrying crisscross about like ants on a heap. Her memory was crowded with empty, pallid faces, each of which she had scanned eagerly without result. Windows, too—thousands of them, and into every one she had strained her eyes, hoping against hope that Clare might be looking out. Now for the first time she felt collapsed, spent, as though for hours on end she had been watching a cinematograph.

The comtesse had gone to her room, but as Iris thought of her own, with its insistent associations, her heart failed. No, not yet. . . . She wandered aimlessly through to the smaller salon and sank into a chair before the flickering wood fire.

The house was silent. Mechanically she drew off her gloves and pulled her hat from her head, which throbbed as though an iron band encircled it. A sigh escaped her, she lay back, closing her eyes. Her fair hair ruffled in disorder about her face, which in the twilight showed a grayish pallor. A casual observer might have supposed her dead.

Some one entered the room, but taking it to be Charles come to draw the curtains, she did not stir. The step, masculine but light, crossed the parquet and paused when it reached the rug, but only when for several seconds she had felt the unseen presence close beside her did she open her eyes. The next instant, galvanized into sudden life, she started to her feet.

She retreated a pace instinctively, then remained transfixed, staring at him. She saw that his face was pale and haggard like her own, with a furrow of anxiety graven between the brows. The eyes, purplish gray, with thick, upturned lashes, looked straight into her own, reflecting a gleam from the fire. The selfish, sensitive lips were pressed together in a line of pain.

So much she took in as she poised ready for instant flight. Then, without a word, trembling in spite of herself, she turned quickly toward the door.

Must you go, Iris? Am I so abhorrent to you?"

He put out a tentative hand, but kept his distance, as though afraid of offending her by any hint of importunity.

Almost against her will she halted, curiously held by a note of suffering in his voice. She came reluctantly a step nearer, gazing at him as from an immeasurable distance. Was this man actually her husband? The idea filled her with indifferent wonderment.

He spoke again, his tone subdued, controlled.

"I will go away if you'd rather. But sooner or later we shall be almost compelled to see each other, and it occurred to me that perhaps at a time like this you might manage to put personal considerations aside. If that's impossible, of course——"

There was a pause, during which, unobtrusively, he picked up the hat and gloves she had dropped in her haste and, smoothing them absently between his fingers, waited for her decision.

Some quality in his manner, difficult to define—a new touch of humility, perhaps—stirred in Iris an odd, unwilling response. Somehow she was made to feel that she was being little and mean. Absorbed in her own grief, she had certainly not reckoned on the possibility that the carefree, indolent Marcel might be shocked and shaken out of himself by what had happened, yet, astonishingly, this seemed to be the case. How stupid of her! What man could fail to be affected by this particular sort of calamity? For the first time in many years she was dimly conscious of a bond between them—the bond that was Clare.

Slowly she returned to the fireplace, keeping her eyes upon his face. She saw him lay her belongings on a table and lightly touch the arm of the chair she had just vacated. Partly in automatic response to the suggestion, and partly because her knees threatened suddenly to give way, she sat down again, commanding herself with an effort.

"You are right," she answered in a coldly reasonable voice. "It is not the moment for differences. But I didn't know you were here. When did you come?"

Her question sounded absurdly trivial, but she could think of nothing better to say.

"Didn't Tante Victoire tell you?" he replied quietly. "The fact is, I am staying here for the present. I gave up my flat two months ago."

She started visibly, swept by flaming anger toward her aunt. Marcel living here—yet without a word of warning Tante Victoire had allowed her to place herself under the same roof with him! For the moment all thought of the old woman's kindness and sympathy was submerged in resentment over the willful deception. How could she! It was unthinkably base.

"Are you upset over the idea? You need not be. The house is large; I shall not intrude upon you. If you prefer it, I'll go away."

She did not answer. After all, what did it matter to her? What did anything matter?

A portion of her benumbed consciousness took stock of him, trying to make out why he seemed so different. She told herself that her aunt was right in one respect. He had altered, though she could not quite say how. A new stability, a concentration of purpose, hitherto foreign to him—what was it? At all events he had left off being a butterfly—of that she felt sure.

Physically he was much the same, the outline of his profile a little sharpened, that was all. It was five years since Iris had seen him at close range, yet in spite of the habits she had ample reason for attributing to him, he retained the youthful figure, clear, dusky pallor, and agile movements which always formed part of his attraction. For his age, which was slightly on the wrong side of forty, he was a remarkably young looking man. Even the present marks of mental suffering—and they were very evident—did nothing to detract from his easy, unstressed charm.

In dress, too, he was what he had formerly been, soigné to a point just escaping foppishness. The dark gray lounge suit of English cut, the accessories perfectly matched and chosen with an eye to the owner's coloring, were admirable in the extreme.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Asks for Seeds and Roots.

"I am a widow with two sons. The eldest is 17 years old, but he isn't able to find a job. I worked until I lost my health a year ago, and since that time it is hard for us to get along. We live in a little shack in the country and have plenty of room for a garden and could plant enough things to provide food for us next winter, and perhaps we could even sell some of the produce, if we had seeds or roots. We can't buy these, and I wonder if some of your readers with gardens would have any strawberry plants, rhubarb roots, or vegetable seed to give us. MRS. M. T."

Truck farmers and those of you who have vegetable gardens may be able to supply this widow with enough roots or seeds to begin her planting. She writes from a small town on the Fox river.

Law Experts Ask Better Crime Figures; Urge Court Reforms

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—Two leaders of the bar today advocated, before the American Law institute, clarification of criminal law and better collection of crime statistics.

George W. Wickersham, chairman of the law enforcement commission, urged the institute to devote itself to a restatement of substantive criminal law, adding the time was "peculiarly opportune" because of the approaching end of the work of his commission.

"Pending such an organization," he said, "some improvement may be possible, but I do not think it will amount to much."

Wickersham, who also is president of the institute, said the two year life of his commission was too short for an adequate investigation into the "effect of law or lack of law."

"Indeed," he said, "some such body as this institute must undertake the necessary constructive follow up work if the labors of the national commission are to fructify into the most useful results."

He added that no thoughtful person who is in touch with the times "can fail to note the existence of a widespread lack of respect for law."

Chief Justice Hughes said he hoped the influence of the annual conference of the senior federal circuit judges would be developed, and added he thought congress should pass legislation giving the conference authority to recommend to it statutary changes in federal courts relating to jurisdiction, practice and evidence.

Parents and Teachers Group Votes Public Ownership of Radio

Hot Springs, Ark., May 7.—(AP)—The annual meeting of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers adjourned late today. Resolutions were adopted asserting a belief broadcasting is an extension of the home and favoring public ownership and operation.

"We believe radio broadcasting is an extension of the home," the resolutions asserted; "that it is a form of education; that the broadcasting channels should forever remain in the hands of the public; that facilities should be fairly divided between national, state, and county governments; that they should be operated at public expense and freed from commercial advertising."

Mrs. Coolidge Honored for Her Work for the Deaf

New York, May 7.—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge was honored tonight for extending a helping hand to the deaf. She and three other persons were awarded the gold medal of the National Institute of Social Sciences at a dinner in the Hotel Pierre. Others who received the medal were Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state; Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, United States department of labor, and Dr. Richard Clarke Cabot, professor of social ethics of Harvard university.

The award to Mrs. Coolidge was based on her "distinguished social services in behalf of the deaf at the Clark school, Northampton, Mass., and for her fine personal influence exerted as the first lady of the land."

Now Two Say Film Director Will Wed Soon

HONOLULU, H. I., May 7.—Mrs. Janet Gattis on her arrival here today from Washington said that within ten days she will marry John McCormick, former film director, whose engagement to Dorothy Mackaill, the film actress, recently was announced but denied. Mr. McCormick, who has established his residence in Honolulu, confirmed his engagement to Mrs. Gattis.

Mrs. Bird J. Vincent also arrived today to join her husband, Representative Bird J. Vincent, who is ill at the Pearl Harbor hospital, and who is now reported to be improving.

Another arrival today was Dana Dawes, son of Ambassador and Mrs. Charles Gates Dawes, with his bride, the former Eleanor Dillingham, daughter of Prof. Frank Dillingham of the University of Hawaii, who were married April 11.

Bertha Palmer to Make Bow in Court May 19

BY THALIA ——.

WHEN Miss Bertha Palmer makes her bow at the Court of St. James's the occasion will be more than just the presentation of another American girl. Miss Palmer and her mother, who also is to be presented, are to arrive in London in a few days to attend the first court on May 19.

Miss Palmer is to be presented by Mrs. Charles G. Dawes at the special request of Maj. Gen. Sir John Hanbury Williams, marshal of the diplomatic corps. Mrs. Palmer will be presented by Princess Cantacuzene, the Potter Palmers' cousin, whose daughter, the former Princess Ida Cantacuzene, is married to the son and namesake of Sir John Hanbury Williams.

This probably is the first instance in which an American woman is being presented at court except by the ambassador, and in this case the consent of Ambassador Dawes was sought and obtained. It also is rarely that a mother and daughter are presented together.

The total list of the regular presentees to the first court will not be made known until next week.

The Friends of Opera closed their season yesterday afternoon by treating themselves to a pleasant musical program and tea in the Drake ballroom. The artists, Michael Bartlett and Ralph Dobbs, were warmly appreciated.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, seated in the front row, led the applause for encores, and Mrs. Charles H. Swift, who had arranged the program, rushed forward after each group of numbers to persuade them to perform again. Mrs. Arthur Meeker presided, wearing a springlike frock of black and white printed crepe and wide brimmed panama hat.

Among the listeners were Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson, Mrs. Harry H. Shearson in a green knitted dress and brown felt hat, Mrs. Charles Dempster in black and turquoise, Mrs. Carroll H. Reiter in black, Mrs. Clair More, Miss Peggy Hamilton, Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, Mrs. Henry Field, and Arthur Meeker Jr. Mrs. Swift wore a black wool ensemble with a three-quarter length coat and long white satin tunic.

Nippon Prince, Princess to Visit Chicago Tuesday.

The dinner to be given for Prince and Princess Takamatsu of Japan at the Palmer house next Tuesday evening is to be very ceremonious. People who have made reservations are being notified that "their imperial highnesses will receive the guests at the dinner at 8 o'clock. It will be necessary accordingly to close the doors at that hour.

"The committee asks you to cooperate by timing your arrival in the dining room not later than 7:45." The ushers are to include Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins, Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, Mrs. Henry Field, Miss Eleanor Dennehy, and Miss Jane Schuttler. Because of the comparative simplicity of their mode of traveling the princess is not going to be able to wear her formal Japanese costume to the dinner, but advance report says her Parisian gowns are beautiful and elaborate.

Invitations to a "Stay at Home ball" have been sent out by the north shore advisory board of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. The society is not to have its annual ball to benefit the Evanston Receiving home this year, so north shore friends are being asked to send checks and participate in an imaginary ball.

Hinsdale Woman's Club Has Successful Fashion Show.

"The Bon Ton Fashion Show of 1893" given last week by the Woman's club of Hinsdale was such a howling success that it's to be repeated this evening at the Hinsdale club. A profusion of apparel worn by fashionable belles of the World's Fair was unearthed from attics and basements, and the show was embellished by soulful renderings of "In the Gloaming," "In the Good Old Summertime," and other appropriate ballads.

Mrs. John Henry Grace Jr. wore the ball gown which her father's cousin, Miss Lea Whitney of New York, had made for the Amherst prom of 1895. To revive further the atmosphere of the period, two of the members, Mrs. James Walker and Mrs. Elsworth Keith, went so far as to ride through the town on a tandem bicycle. Tonight's performance will benefit the United Charities of Hinsdale.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ashley Magie II. of 469 Maple avenue, Winnetka, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, William Ashley Magey III., on Monday.

Sorry! Miss Elizabeth Williamson's marriage to John Bancroft Hammond is to take place on May 23 at the Church of the Ascension instead of May 20, as announced in yesterday morning's TRIBUNE. A reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Williamson of 1517 Dearborn parkway, is to follow the service.

Of portending events — The board of directors of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children announces a dedication ceremony of the Nancy Adele McElwee Memorial, to be held in the assembly room of the University of Chicago clinics at 11 o'clock next Tuesday morning, and the house committee of the home has issued invitations for a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth Spaulding McElwee following the dedication. Dr. Robert B. Osgood, professor of orthopedic surgery in the Harvard Medical school, is to give the dedication address. . . . Mrs. Otto Kaspar is to be hostess at the Drake for next week's luncheon meeting of the opera box committee on Wednesday. . . . A reception and tea for Arthur Meeker Jr. is to be given next Monday afternoon in the Saints and Sinners corner of Kroch's bookstore to celebrate the publication of his new book, "Strange Capers."

The marriage of Miss Marion Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herbert Lewis of Rockford, Ill., to H. Stanley Wanzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hill Wanzer of 6463 Kimbark avenue, took place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the Hilton Memorial chapel of the University of Chicago. Dr. Charles Gilkey read the service, which was attended by members of the immediate families of the bride and the bridegroom. A wedding breakfast at the Blackstone hotel followed the ceremony. After that Mr. and Mrs. Wanzer departed to sail for a wedding trip of six or eight weeks in Italy.

The former Miss Lewis is a graduate of Rockford college, where she had the highest scholastic record in its history. For the last three years she has been doing garduate work at the University of Chicago and is now a candidate for the degree of doctor of philosophy. She has been residing at Hull house. Mr. Wanzer is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, class of 1918, and is a member of Chi Psi fraternity, Midlothian Country club, the Illinois Athletic club, and the Interfraternity club.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Jr., Miss Marjorie Gould Drexel, and Anthony J. Drexel, 3d, left today for Cuba, where they will go aboard their yacht, Queen of Scots, and sail for France.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sloan returned today from a seven months' tour of the world, which included among other stops Burma, Java, Sumatra, China, and Japan.

Mrs. Plummer Schley and her daughter, Miss Gertrude Schley, are passing the week at their country place in Sharon, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. House are in Vermont for two weeks.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover held a reception this afternoon for the delegates to the International Chamber of Commerce congress. The marine band played in the corridor but the guests could not enjoy the White House gardens and grounds because of the threatening weather. Earlier in the day President and Mrs. Hoover received the delegates to the American Legion Auxiliary convention, which opened today in the Red Cross building.

Mrs. Mitchell, wife of the attorney general, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts of the United States Supreme court, received at the tea given this afternoon at the Mayflower by the American Law institute for members and guests here for the annual meeting and the ladies accompanying them.

Mrs. William R. Castle Jr., wife of the undersecretary of state, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the assistant secretary of state; Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, wife of the undersecretary of the treasury; Mrs. Joseph E. Davies; Mrs. Frederick E. Brooke; and Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher all entertained companies at luncheon today for ladies accompanying delegates to the International Chamber of Commerce congress.

Pastors Discuss Narrow Path vs. the Highway

How are rural churches to catch communicants who take to their mile a minute automobiles on Sundays? This problem, together with many others which are outgrowths of modern American life are being threshed out by 40 administrators of the Methodist Episcopal church of the Chicago, Detroit, Indianapolis and St. Paul areas in a two day home missions meeting closing today at the Chicago temple.

These administrators, for the most part district superintendent of the church, have presented to the meeting many surveys of social and economic conditions confronting church work of the central west.

Dr. Howard A. Field, superintendent of the Detroit district, pointed out that communities nowadays change so rapidly there that it is impossible to tell when a new church is located today what sort of a neighborhood it will serve tomorrow.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—The affairs of Tommy Thomas, once a pitching ace, are as unsettled as ever. He tried to tame the Tigers today as further evidence of the recovery of his arm, but for the fifth time this season he was blasted from the game almost as soon as his act started. The runs that grew from this bit of hitting were enough to let Detroit coast to a 6 to 1 victory over the White Sox in the last of the series.

However, there was one consoling feature about the defeat. The Sox batted muffed popups nor kicked grounders, as has been their habit of late, so it is possible that they have their defense back in such order as to provide the Yankees at least a few worrisome moments in the opener of the series tomorrow at Comiskey park. Bill McKain will be intrusted with the job of trying to spoil the reception planned for Joe McCarthy in his first appearance in Chicago as an American league manager. McCarthy's choice probably will be between Vern Grimes and George Pipgras.

Six Batters Chase Thomas.

Thomas' tenure this afternoon was brought to a close as soon as six Detroit batters had faced him. Four of them hit safely, one for an extra base. One of them walked and one flied out. All this promoted four runs, and to all intents and purposes concluded the competition right then and there. After Thomas was excused Faber, Russ, and Braxton took turns pitching, and their efforts, while commendable, were of no value.

Runs for the Sox were held to a minimum because of a scattered attack against Vic Sorrell, who had the help of a sprightly defense. Vic was inclined to be careless about his control, and nine of his pitches were converted into base hits. In the pinches, however—and he was in these in all except one inning—he was well nigh invincible. All the Chicagoans could

BY EDWARD BURNS.

It took the Cubs a long time yesterday to realize on their brutal plan to give the Reds one more kick regardless of weather, turnstile clicks or peanut sales. They won in the 11th inning, 5 to 4, after having evened the count with a four run rally in the eighth inning.

It was the fifth victory the Cubs have won from the Reds this season and the fifteenth lost by the Reds in their 17 National league games.

Reds Get Four Runs.

But for the frenzied desire of the Cubs to further tramp on the Reds in their present weakened condition, the game probably would have been postponed, for more unfavorable weather conditions never were braved for a contest in Chicago. The smallest crowd that has seen the Cubs play in recent years endured the frigidity. The gathering was estimated at fewer than 1,000.

It appeared for eight innings that

THREE FIGHTERS SEEK TO REVERSE DEFEATS TONIGHT

The parade of champions will be resumed tonight at the Chicago Stadium where Young Jack Thompson, the welterweight title holder, and Max Schmeling, heavyweight king, appear in the ring.

It will be the second consecutive show at the west side arena in which two champions have participated. Unlike the Tony Canzoneri-Jack Kid Berg affair, however, when both men risked their title, no championship will be at stake tonight.

Thompson, twice holder of the 147 pound crown, meets his former conqueror, Bucky Lawless, in a ten round overweight match. Schmeling's part of the entertainment will be strictly theatrical. He will box four rounds with two sparring partners by way of substantiating the contentions of his manager, Joe Jacobs, that he has improved immeasurably.

Levinsky Seeks Revenge.

Of the four bouts composing the card, three bring together men who met before. In each case, oddly enough, the favorite in tonight's engagement is seeking retaliation for a previous defeat. Lawless whipped Thompson just a year ago when the dapper champion was at his best. Rocco has the aforementioned decision over Levinsky, achieved ten days ago, and Harry Dublinsky, west side lightweight, has been outpointed by his opponent, Tommy Grogan, hard punching Omaha challenger.

Lawless has the support of the fans, but Thompson is the choice of the odds makers. Lawless has had a varied career in his five years of professional campaigning. He has been knocked out five times, but each time came back to soundly drub his conqueror. His milling style, in which he takes two punches to get in one, often gets him into trouble, particularly if he is meeting a stiff puncher like Thompson.

Thinks It's a Warmup.

Thompson will be making his first start since he won the championship back from Tommy Freeman. He views tonight's fight as a warmup for a defense of his title against Young Corbett, of Los Angeles, but faces the

French Boxers Catch Breath and Call Reception Knockout

BY HEROL EGAN.

"Mon dieu, they won't believe me when I tell them back home about all this," gasped Marcel Esnault, sturdy little lightweight, yesterday, when the tumult and the blaze of flashlights had died down after Chicago's great reception to the French boxing team.

"Do you think they will give me some pictures to take home and show my papa? Then he won't laugh at me. They took more pictures of me than were taken of Monsieur le Député during the last election."

Marcel is a marble worker and lives in the little village of Brignac, in the center of France. His trade is to carve ornaments on the handsome fireplaces that still adorn so many of the great houses and châteaux in the country districts of France. But when times are dull he passes his time chiseling out tombstones for ailing friends. This industrious habit, Marcel sadly admitted, had not increased his popularity in his native village. "The French," he said, "lack foresight. I am sure that progressive people like the Americans would not feel the same way about it."

Design Fails to Please.

During the voyage over Marcel drew the design of a beautiful tombstone for M. Cuny, coach and trainer of the French team. He showed it to the latter when the France was pitching and tossing during the only bit of bad weather experienced during the crossing. M. Cuny turned even a shade greener and rushed for the rail. When he had accomplished that for which he had gone there he turned wrathfully and shouted:

"Name of a dog, Esnault, you're off the team. Fini le boxe. Can't you forget tombstones and think about boxing?"

That design was a knockout, wasn't it," replied Esnault as he went aft seeking more sympathetic company.

But perhaps the proudest boy on the whole French team was diminutive Andre Perrier, 112 pounder, who had the honor of shaking hands with Mayor Cermak. Not only that, but his picture was taken while doing it. Andre had never seen, let alone shaken hands, with such a great man before. He told his envious and admiring friends about it in the gymnasium just before dinner. Andre is a carpenter by trade.

Shakes Hands with Mayor.

"I was just standing there with the rest of you," he said, "when his honor smiled and kind of made a motion for me with his left hand. He looked so kind and good that I was not at all afraid."

"He probably felt sorry for you," said Delehayes, the blond barber, who had been shoved into the background while modestly advancing to shake hands himself.

"Ah, non, it was not that. Mayors of great cities like Chicago can't go around shaking hands with everybody. They must choose the right kind of people. Monsieur le Maire did not make an error."

Alexandre Elyas, captain of the French team and a student at the University of Paris, is a keen observer as well as a scientific boxer. He summed up his impressions by saying:

"Chicago has made a tremendous impression on me. More so even than New York. It seems so industrious. The reception we received passed anything that I had ever imagined. I can never, never forget the scene when the parade passed down the street between those tall buildings, and those fluttering bits of paper were like a snowstorm in the mountains. And everybody has been so kind to us. I am sure Chicago loves France as we are so quickly learning to love Chicago."

Police Clear Way.

The thing that impressed Gaston Mayor most was the way the motorcycle police cleared the streets of traffic.

"We must have speeded along at 50 kilometers an hour," he said. "And right through heavy traffic, too. I never saw anything like that in Paris."

For today Coach Cuny has prescribed light training for his team. At 3:30 the boys will go out for some road work, probably lasting for about an hour. They will all have a brisk rubdown on returning to the Medinah club.

At 3:30 in the afternoon the boys will go to the gymnasium for a light workout, including some sparring and physical culture. They will then rest until dinner. In the evening they will go to the fights at Chicago Stadium.

The team has already received numerous invitations to luncheons, dinners, and receptions, but M. Cuny is anxious that the boys get into tiptop condition for the fights.

"After Tuesday night, yes," he said. "But now we must work so as to win for France."

CERMAK VOICES CITY'S GREETING TO INVADERS

Golden Gloves Boys Acclaim Foes.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago, they're here. Ten French boys, eight of them national amateur boxing champions of France, reached the loop yesterday afternoon. On next Tuesday night at Soldiers' field they will meet America's Golden Gloves winners in the first international tournament sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

What tumult, what cheering when these French invaders steamed into Union station at 3 o'clock aboard the Manhattan limited. The reception climaxed a trip already without precedent.

Scarcely had the long train of pullmans come to a stop when the van of the reception committee hurried down the dim aisle of the train shed to the private car of the visitors. Charles de Ferry de Fontnouvelle, French consul, Tribune officials, and Chicago's Golden Gloves squad gathered at the pullman steps.

Chicagoans Cheer Opponents.

"Vive la France!" shouted the Chicago boys. They had been practicing this greeting since early morning at their training quarters in the Illinois Athletic club.

"Vive la France!" And then little Andre Perrier, 112 pound champion, his dark blue beret over one eye, hopped down the steps. He was followed by his mates, Bruyere, Mayor, Zigan, Esnault, Delahayes, Aubrey, Lerat, and then Jean Elyas, the captain and light heavyweight, a student at the Sorbonne and the only boxer who can speak more than a few hesitating words of English. And Fernand Laudrin, 189 pound heavyweight. Don't forget him. He'll fight Yustin Sirutis, New York university senior, next Tuesday night.

Dardell, Sirutis Arrive.

Hasty greetings, staccato French phrases, and snappy Chicago slang, this from America's Golden Gloves. Our boys soon located their comrades from New York, Phil Dardell, inter city welter[illegible]ght champion, and Sirutis, and the[illegible]s for the waiting room was on.

Just in[illegible] the grilled iron gates was drawn [illegible]tachment of French war veterans. [illegible]heir bright blue uniforms and standards of French and American flags had attracted a huge throng, station employes, passengers and idlers, which increased with each minute. The high vaulted marble reverberated to the booming drums and piercing bugles of the Medill post of the American Legion. They, too, were brilliantly uniformed.

While police held back the crowd and with the buglers leading, the visitors were escorted up the stairs to waiting cars. Motorcycles roared, the crowd cheered, and the French team started for the city hall.

Cermak Welcomes Frenchmen.

Across Jackson boulevard marched the soldiers and drummers. The officials and the French and American boxers followed. The parade turned north in La Salle street. Hundreds lined the sidewalks and street intersections. From the high windows of Chicago's financial district, long spiraling strings of ticker tape and fluttering bits of paper floated down slowly. The crowds applauded again and again as the French champions passed.

At the city hall, the French boys

FRENCH TAKE CHICAGO—BUT THEY HAVE FIGHT ON THEIR HANDS TUESDAY

After parading through the loop and meeting Mayor Cermak, the French amateur boxing champions who will fight America's Golden Gloves team at Soldiers' Field Tuesday, make the Medinah A. C. their home. The boys gather around Fernand Cuny, coach, as he does the registering.

"Chicago's a great city." This phrase was in letters the French boys wrote to relatives immediately after they were assigned to their rooms.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Ed Reese, a veteran in the selling platter ranks, had some 7,500 racegoers standing up on their chairs cheering for him when the best race on the program at the Aurora track ended yesterday.

For old Ed had sizzled around the mile and an eighth course in almost track record time and he came from behind with such a game rally in the stretch to beat the even money favorite, that even those who bet against him gave him a hand.

Ed Reese ran his mile and a furlong in 1:54 3-5, which was within a second of the track record. He performed his task over a racing strip that was very dull and a bit muddy in spots. And when he poked his nose in front in the last half dozen strides he rewarded those who backed him to the tune of $22.54 for each two dollars invested.

Sets Fast Early Pace.

Laurie, the favorite, tried nobly to reward his many admirers, but his jockey, H. Roble, probably lost the race for him by trying to outrun old Jack Alexander in the early stages. Jack Alexander held on so long that Laurie was fairly exhausted when Jack finally decided to quit as they headed into the stretch. But despite the fast pace Jack Alexander carried him, Laurie romped out into the lead. Then Ed Reese pulled out into a slight lead which he held until the finish.

It was the first of two winning rides which Hanford turned in. He came right back in the fifth race and made Everlasting step so lively the son of Eternal every inch of the mile and seventy yards and won in a canter by six lengths from another favorite. The favorite to fall in this number was The Alderman, which had scored brilliantly only 24 hours earlier.

Alderman Goes Lame.

The Alderman was second and pulled up lame, but he couldn't have beaten Everlasting with eight or nine sound legs. There was a plunge on Everlasting which drove the price against him down from 15 to 1 in the opening betting to 4 to 1 at post time. Finnster wound up in third place.

The best looking 2 year old to come to the front at Aurora so far during the meeting showed up in the third race when Ultie Vote, a daughter of Raffles-Smiling Veter, owned by Clayton Morris of Kentucky, made a show of her field, which included 11 others of her age which had never won a race.

She dashed to the front on the turn and was never threatened. Thistle Lass wound up in second place and Cousin Judy was third, but neither ever threatened Ultie Vote. The winner was making her first start, but her workouts had been sensational and she was backed with much confidence.

possibility of being beaten again by Lawless and eventually forced into defending the championship against him. Lawless is seeking a match with Corbett to decide the ranking contendership.

Levinsky's return to the Stadium ring follows a few forays into the eastern boxing centers, where he was successful only to a moderate degree. Against Rocco, for instance, he claims he was deprived of the decision by biased Pittsburgh officials. Immediately after the bout his sister-manager, Lena Levy, approached promoters in Cleveland, Milwaukee, Detroit and Chicago for a return match. Nate Lewis, of the Stadium, made the first move and succeeded in landing the bout, which is expected to revive Maxwell street's faith in the King's ring prowess. Rocco was more than willing to sign for the match.

Dublinsky and Grogan seem to have captured the interest of the local fight gentry, even more than Levinsky's feud with Rocco. Ralph Lenny of Jersey City had previously been matched with Grogan, when the Omaha veteran refused to meet Dublinsky. One decision over him sufficed, Grogan said. When Lenny became ill, it was necessary for Grogan to take Dublinsky or be dismissed from the card. He chose the Polish pride and the purse.

Danny Delmont, whose success in local clubs earned a chance in the Stadium, meets Davey Abad, Panama lightweight. Delmont is a terrific puncher and will rely upon this means to thwart Abad's superior boxing skill.

Clock Tower Fast in Drill for Preakness

Baltimore, Md., May 7.—[Special.]—The Pimlico race track today was muddy after an all night rain, but clear and cooler weather was forecast for tomorrow, and the track may be fast by post time for the Preakness Saturday. Twenty Grand does not like the mud, but Equipoise does.

Those who held the split second watches at the workouts this morning were curious to know just how good a horse Morton L. Schwartz's Clock Tower is. Max Hirsch sent the black son of Snob II.-Daylight Saving a mile and a quarter in the bad going in 2:11 2-5.

Harry Shillick, who worked Equipoise yesterday, held the reins on Clock Tower and he almost flew the first part of the Derby route. His fractional times were :24, :48, 1:15 3-5, mile in 1:42 2-5, and mile and a quarter in 2:11 2-5. This was smart stepping on such a track.

Mate Goes Seven Furlongs.

Scott Harlan had W. M. Jefford's Aegis, Preakness and Derby candidate, on the track and sent him a mile and a furlong in 2:06.

A. C. Bostwick's Mate, third choice for the Preakness, regardless of track conditions, was sent seven furlongs in :24 4-5, :49, 1:15 2-5, and 1:29 4-5.

James Rowe Jr., trainer for the Greentree stable, which includes Twenty Grand and Surf Board, sent Twenty Grand the fastest mile and a furlong yesterday that any horse except My Own went over this track in a trial. Watches varied slightly, but the consensus was 1:51 for the mile and a furlong of Twenty Grand's final preparation.

Equipoise's Time Slower.

In the afternoon C. V. Whitney's Equipoise had a remarkable trial, but it was slower than Twenty Grand's. The majority of the watches had his time for the distance at 1:52 2-5. Fred Hopkins, trainer of Equipoise, timed his colt in 1:52 3-5. Equipoise, stricken ill at Havre de Grace, seems to have recovered, and the fractions of a second in dispute make little difference.

DERBY CANDIDATES

The Latest Flash on the 3-Year-Olds Which Will Battle for Kentucky's Famous Turf Prize on May 16.

—BY FRENCH LANE—

INSCO.

Owner—Griffin Watkins.
Trainer—B. J. Durnell.

For here's the biggest puzzle in the Kentucky Derby. A great colt on many occasions, a bum lots of other times.

Will he be great on Derby day, or just a no account?

Our old friend, Mr. Binoculars, who has lifted us out of a lot of tight spots, is rather inclined to think that Insco is going to be a real race horse on the afternoon of the Derby.

"I've watched him outwork every Derby colt in the west, not only once but a half dozen times, this spring," says Mr. Binoculars.

But Mr. Binoculars admits along with a lot of other folks that he saw Insco perform very much like a selling plater in his first outing this year against other Derby candidates.

Insco ran about that way around Chicago in midsummer last year. He wasn't much until the Post and Paddock stakes at Arlington park came along. Then he suddenly developed into a superhorse. He won the Post and Paddock by about as far as anybody can throw a rock. And he beat plenty of fashionable 2 year olds when he turned the trick.

He is a son of Sir Gallahad II.-Starlight, so there are few better bred 3 year olds in the country. For Sir Gallahad III. is the daddy of Gallant Fox, the champion of last year. Sir Gallahad III. has sired a lot of other topnotch race horses. Why shouldn't Insco carry on?

There's sort of an undercurrent rumor going the rounds that Insco will surprise a lot of people in the Derby. The whisper is that the horse that beats him will win the Derby.

There are a thousand rumors every afternoon on every race track. Not many of them are to be believed. But one should stop and listen when he overhears somebody talking about Insco.

followed the police as they forced an aisle through the throng to the elevators. Then to the office of Mayor Cermak.

"I am pleased to welcome you, the amateur boxing champions of France, to Chicago," Mayor Cermak said in his greeting.

"I compliment you on your record of achievement. You are here to meet the sons of America in friendly combat. They, too, are champions. They have won Golden Gloves, symbolic of congenial long established rivalry between New York and Chicago.

"It is fitting that the contest for Golden Gloves has become international. And it is appropriate that France, long an ally of this republic, whose soldiers a few years ago fought shoulder to shoulder with the soldiers of America, now should engage in friendly battle.

"I do not know, of course, whether or next Tuesday night at Soldiers' field you will defeat our boys or whether you will meet defeat. But I am certain that no matter the outcome the cause of friendship between two great nations will have prospered. Victor or vanquished, that rivalry must add to a mutual regard, long standing.

"It is my sincere wish that you enjoy your visit. Again may I express the pleasure that is mine when I extend to you Chicago's greetings."

Replying in French to Mayor Cermak's speech of welcome, Dr. Sebenq said:

"Monsieur le maire, we in France feel profoundly the honor that Chicago and citizens us in inviting a French team to meet the winners of the Golden Gloves tournament.

"You have just said, Monsieur le maire, that France is a great country. It is true. But America is a very great country. It is with great and intense emotion that we have come to it from across the Atlantic.

"You have alluded to French courage. I am sure that our team will live up to this reputation. After the splendid enthusiasm which has been manifested in your city, permit me, as in clasping your hand, to cry:

"'Vive l'Amerique. Vive Chicago.'"

Then more the room, now crowded to its capacity, resounded with the cheers of the French soldiers and boxers.

Later with the police leading, the boys were taken back to their conveyance and then directly to the Illinois Athletic club.

The four thousand mile journey began a week ago last Wednesday was spent.

Paul Cuny, a little man whose sole thought during the long miles has been the constant care of his champions, won had the boys at home in their quarters. At no time has Cuny forgotten that the purpose of this visit is to fight the Golden Gloves boxers of America. And his long experience as boxing coach for French Olympic teams has prepared him for his position.

Cuny Maps Training Program.

From now until Tuesday Cuny has laid out his training schedule. In the main the team trained satisfactorily on board the steamship. And one glance yesterday at these rugged, perfectly conditioned sons of France was proof that Tuesday's international bouts will force America to the limit to win.

Chicago's intercity champions had limbered their boxing drills earlier in the afternoon to meet the visitors, but immediately after the reception the boys rushed back to the I. A. C. There they donned ring togs and with Manny Tanger in charge, they pounded away with added incentive, now that they had seen their rivals.

All reserved tickets for the international bouts have been sold. The only opportunity other Chicago fans will have to watch the champions of France and America will be to purchase one of the 50 cent general admission tickets. Fifty thousand of these tickets now are on sale at the west side, south side, and loop public service offices of THE TRIBUNE. If cold weather or rain forces the bouts indoors, these tickets, of course, will be redeemed. However, by purchasing them now the holders may enter Soldiers' field without delay Tuesday afternoon. The gates will open at 4 o'clock.

AVOID DELAY AT GOLDEN GLOVES

Fifty thousand general admission tickets to the international bouts between the Golden Gloves champions of America and France at Soldiers' field Tuesday night are on sale at The Tribune's Public Service offices. They cost 50 cents.

You can avoid congestion at the gate by obtaining your ticket in advance. Fans will be admitted to Soldiers' field at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Early arrivals will get the choice seats. You will have a better chance of getting a good location if you don't wait in line to purchase a ticket.

The Public Service offices are located at 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4801 West Madison street. The north and west side offices are open from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. Buy your ticket today!

In the WAKE of the NEWS

FIFTEEN ROUND BOUTS.

THE Illinois house of representatives has passed a bill increasing the limit on boxing contests held in this state from ten to fifteen rounds. The measure now goes to the state senate. If we are to have legalized boxing—and we have it now—The Wake thinks the measure should be approved.

Passage of this bill will not, in our opinion, materially increase the number of fifteen round contests. In fact, that privilege is likely to be reserved for title affairs, which was the point urged in its favor by its sponsors. Champions often dislike to risk their title to a decision at the shorter distance of ten rounds. With the longer limit, Chicago would be placed on an equality with other cities in bidding for championships, so far as distance is concerned.

The reason we do not feel there will be a material increase in fifteen round mills, if the measure is passed, is because patrons have shown a liking for short bouts and more of them. This is strikingly illustrated by the several Golden Gloves tourneys, where the amateurs, by rule, are limited to three and four rounds.

Shorter bouts produce more action. There cannot be the same amount of time devoted to sizing up an opponent. In a three round set-to every minute counts toward the compilation of points. If there are fifteen rounds to go, contestants are more inclined to husband their physical resources, to save something for the finish.

Smart promoters will recognize this predilection of patrons for short, fast contests. They hardly will risk booking other than champions for the longer distance. If a bout is dull or uninteresting, ten or even eight rounds is too long. Often we have seen good preliminaries "save" a show from what proved a mediocre windup.

The baby riot staged by the Tigers as soon as they caught sight of Thomas in the first inning began with Johnson singling, after which he stole second. H. Walker walked. The bases were filled by Koenig's hard single, which Cissell slapped down. Alexander filed to Fothergill, scoring Johnson and moving up the two other runners. Stone doubled to right to score H. Walker and Koenig. Stone scored on a single by McManus, and that was the end of Thomas. Faber brought the inning to a close without further scoring.

Tigers Get One in Second.

Faber let Detroit have another run in the second. With one out, H. Walker grounded to Blue, and Faber, whose legs don't carry him around as well as they once did, couldn't get over to cover first. In the race for the bag Blue lost. Koenig sent Walker to third on a single to right. Alexander singled in the same direction and Walker scored.

The Chicagoans scored their only run in the third. Blue walked after two were out and scored on singles by Reynolds and Fothergill. Simons followed with a pass, which filled the bases, but Cissel's whistling liner sailed straight into Owen's hands. Then, as a means of recapturing this run, Owen stepped up in the home third and hit Faber's first pitch for a home run over the left field wall. This made the score 6 to 1.

Another of the few scoring chances which the Sox enjoyed came up in the sixth. It benefited nobody except Faber, who was able to quit work for a pinch hitter. Cissell was safe on a fumble by Koenig and dashed to third on a single by Tate. One was out when this happened. Then Jeffries fanned and Watwood, who batted for Faber, bounced into a force out. A similar opening came in the seventh on Kerr's single and a pass to Reynolds, but Fothergill struck out and Simons popped to Koenig.

Fade Out Again in Eighth.

The eighth brought one more possibility for the Chicago fellows. Tate, who with Reynolds did most of the Sox hitting, singled for the third time. Jeffries fanned, making the second out. Appling, who had been interned pending recovery from his fear of pop-ups, was permitted to bat for Moore. He walked, but a moment later Kerr grounded to Koenig.

Cubs Defeat Reds, 5 to 4, in Eleven Innings

the Cub victory greed would be disappointed, for the Reds, encouraged by Hornsby's third error of the afternoon, fell on Bob Smith for four runs, on a single, a walk, a double, a triple, and another double in the fifth, and Johnson seemed in the succeeding innings well able to protect the advantage.

But having endured the probability of pneumonia, the Cubs were not willing to have their plot go awry. They made five hits in a row in the eighth and piled up enough runs to tie the count.

The Cubs filled the bases in the ninth, but couldn't win. They were more successful in the eleventh. Wilson walked with one out and went to third on Cuyler's double. Stephenson was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Grace then batted for J. Taylor and sent a long fly to Roettger, Wilson scored the winning run after the catch.

Play Giants Tomorrow.

The Reds developed the first threat of the game in the second inning, despite the fact Smith rang up two strikeouts and was nicked for but one hit, an infield affair. Cuccinello was called out on strikes, but Cullop beat out a bunt down the third base line. Roettger fanned, but Sukeforth sent a fly to left which Stephenson muffed, Cullop pulling up at third and Sukeforth reaching second. Bell threw out Durocher to end the suspense.

Two errors by Hornsby in the third failed to precipitate any serious trouble for the Cubs. Johnson was safe on Hornsby's wide throw. Stripp lined to Stephenson and Heathcote popped to Blair. Hornsby juggled Crabtree's grounder and runners were on first and second, where they died when Cuccinello lined to Wilson.

How Reds Scored.

The Cubs wasted a double and a single in their end of the third after Bell and Smith had been thrown out. Blair doubled and went to third while English was bouncing a single over Johnson's head. Hornsby ended it when he popped a foul to Crabtree.

Cubs Tie Score.

BY BOB BECKER.

If the white tailed deer in the Argonne national forest east of Three Lakes, Wis., get any tamer than we saw them a few days ago, they will have to be taken in hand by the government and taught how to get off the track of a logging railroad and also how to stay off motor roads. Coming out of this big new forest which Uncle Sam is establishing in Oneida and Forest counties, we had two experiences with the deer population which show how little they fear a snorting little logging engine.

Our trout fishing trip was over and the little engine was hauling us out of the big timber and through the cutover country where the new national forest is being put into shape for public use. Suddenly we heard several commanding blasts on the whistle.

Looking ahead on the narrow gauge track our party saw two deer insolently disputing the right of way. Even when forced to gallop off the right of way they just moved a short distance into the woods and stood quietly watching this highly entertaining show. A few minutes later we looked out of the window of the coach [which had been our camp for the trout fishing trip] and there, not 125 feet from the train, were four more deer apparently very much engrossed in watching the smoking engine and in hearing the clatter of the train on steel rails.

Deer are abundant up there in Uncle Sam's new national forest which should be open to the public next year, as by that time E. W. Tinker, district forester, expects to have roads, fire fighting equipment and camp sites in shape. Coming into our trout camp several in our fishing party counted 17 deer from the train, a good indication of the number in this region.

Up there in the 148,000 acres of the Argonne the deer population could be of such size that it would move into adjacent open country and provide fine deer hunting for sportsmen.

PROTEST AGAINST CUBS' VICTORY IS THROWN OUT

New York, May 7.—(AP)—President John Heydler of the National league today announced he would not allow the protest filed by the St. Louis Cardinals on the game the Chicago Cubs won at Chicago on April 19.

The score of the game was 4 to 1. The Cardinals had asked that it be replayed.

The protest was based on the decision of Umpire Charles Moran, who had ruled Riggs Stephenson, Chicago outfielder, had held a ball "momentarily," retiring a St. Louis batter. St. Louis claimed that ball should have been declared a double.

Sport Leaders Band to Keep Track Trials

With announcement from the Pacific coast that an effort will be made to move the final Olympic track and field tryouts from Chicago to the coast, city sports leaders yesterday prepared for a battle before the American Olympic track and field committee which meets here a week from tomorrow.

The award of the tryouts to Chicago was believed to have been final, but Pacific coast sports groups have organized with the idea of besieging the committee to have the trials in the west.

"The track and field committee gave great thought to the venue of the final tryouts and to the date when they should be held. There were four things that were considered: First, convenience to all concerned; second, facilities and accommodations; third, that America's participation in the Olympic games is a national enterprise, and, fourth, the question of gate receipts.

"After an exhaustive discussion the tryouts were awarded to Chicago. When the subject came up before the American Olympic committee proper, because of telegraphic protests received from the coast, another long discussion ensued, after which the action of the track and field committee was approved.

"Statements have been made on the Pacific coast that political influence was exerted within the organization to secure the tryouts for Chicago. As a matter of fact, the subject was not considered by the athletic interests in Chicago and the Chicago member of the track and field committee was not even present when the question was settled. No overtures were made by any one in Chicago to secure these tryouts.

Establish Golf Play for U. S., British Women

New York, May 7.—(AP)—The feminine equivalent of the classic Walker cup golf matches was established officially today by the United States Golf association in sanctioning a new international series of team matches between British and American women. The first will be played in Great Britain in 1932, since the Walker cup contest for men is slated for the United States next year.

Competition probably will be held at two year intervals, the same as the Walker cup, the site alternating between the two countries.

The trophy for the new series will be known as the Curtis cup. It has been donated by the Misses Margaret and Harriet Curtis of Boston, both former national champions.

CONTINENTAL CHICAGO CORP. SHIFTS STOCK

Reduces Holdings of Common Shares.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Important changes have been made in the holdings of the Continental Chicago corporation since the latter part of 1930, it is shown in the investment trust's portfolio as of April 30, which was made public last night. As a result of the shifting the concern now has only 52 per cent of its holdings in common stock as compared with 68 per cent on Jan. 1.

A balance sheet as of April 30 was also made public showing total assets of $64,270,113, as compared with $67,775,612 as shown in the pro forma balance sheet as of Nov. 3, 1930, which gave effect to the consolidation of Continental Chicago with Chicago Corporation. The April 30 balance sheet lists common stocks of $34,029,288, which includes $5,620,616 of bank and insurance shares. The securities are carried at cost, which, it is explained, is based on values as of Dec. 8, 1930, the date of the completion of the merger of Continental Chicago and Chicago Corporation.

Sells U. S. Steel Shares.

Comparison of the portfolio of April 30 with that of Nov. 3, 1930, shows that the big investment trust has disposed of its holdings in many important industrial companies and reduced its holdings in many others. During the period the company sold 14,600 shares of United States Steel common and now holds only 4,700 shares in its portfolio. It also disposed of its entire holdings in Insull Utility Investments common, which amounted to 24,556 shares, and added 21,908 shares to investments in Middle West Utilities. Purchase of an additional 3,500 shares of Peoples Gas stock was also made, which brings its total investment to 4,100 shares.

Among the common stocks which the company sold out entirely were American Can, 6,000 shares; American Car and Foundry, 3,400 shares; American Superpower, 9,700 shares; Baltimore and Ohio, 9,800 shares; Bethlehem Steel, 4,800 shares; Krueger & Toll, 4,900; Radio Corporation, 11,000 shares; Republic Steel, 4,400 shares; Westinghouse Electric, 4,500 shares; Nevada Consolidated Copper, 10,000 shares.

Holds Overland Stock.

The largest number of shares of one company in common stock was 300,300 shares of Willys Overland company, which is unchanged since the last report. The firm sold 6,500 shares of General Motors, reducing its holdings in that stock to 12,000 shares.

Among the common stock issues in which the investment was increased were Commonwealth Edison, 1,700 shares; Continental Can, 1,000 shares; Marshall Field, 13,282 shares; Sears-Roebuck, 2,616 shares; Southern Pacific, 2,300 shares; Texas Corporation, 5,900 shares; and Standard Gas, 3,000 shares.

Reports on Asset Values.

Charles F. Glore, president, says that on April 30 the net assets of the corporation amounted to $66.36 a share on the outstanding preference stock and $5.16 a share on common after deducting the preference stock at its stated value of $55 a share. The preference is entitled to $55 a share in liquidation. The assets of the corporation are now invested as follows: Cash and U. S. government securities, 10.80 per cent; demand and short term notes, 6.53 per cent; bonds other than U. S. government securities, 20.25 per cent; common stock, 52.94 per cent; other investments including accrued interest and dividends declared, 6.38 per cent.

Continental Chicago common closed yesterday on the Chicago exchange at 6 and the preferred finished at 37. Both issues moved with the general market trend which was extremely narrow. Trading in all classes of stock was dull with only 88,000 shares changing hand. Closing prices represented no significant changes from the previous day's quotations.

NEW YORK SETS CHEAPEST BANK RATE IN HISTORY

Rediscount at 1½% to Aid Recovery.

New York, May 7.—(AP)—In what Wall street interpreted as an effort to aid business recovery, the federal reserve bank of New York reduced its rediscount rate from 2 to 1½ per cent today.

Although the federal reserve system has no dealings with most business men or the general public, such action is of fundamental importance to the business world. The rediscount rate is the charge made by the federal reserve bank on money which it lends to its member banks, secured by loans which the members have in turn granted to their customers.

The present reduction has a number of unusual features. The new 1½ per cent rate is the lowest in the history of the federal reserve system. So far as could be learned today it is the lowest rate ever charged by any central bank in the world. A careful checking of the records of the Bank of England back to 1760 failed to disclose so low a charge. The reduction is the eighth to be made since the 6 per cent rate was adopted on Aug. 9, 1929, previous to the stock market crash. The 2 per cent rate was established on Dec. 24, 1930.

View Among Bankers.

Official comment on the reduction was not obtainable, but the commonest view among bankers attributed the action to an attempt to stimulate the bond market. One of the troublesome features of present business conditions is the excessive supply of short term money or credit. The action of the federal reserve bank of New York in reducing its buying yield rates for bankers' acceptances three times within two weeks, which are the equivalent of increases in price, thus making them less attractive for short term investment, is regarded as an attempt to discourage further investments in such securities, and divert them into bonds.

As another step toward diverting funds from the short term to the long term money market, of which bonds constitute a large portion, some bankers believe that commercial banks throughout the country will reduce their interest rates on deposits. The theory back of all these developments is that if the yield rates on short term investments of all sorts are pushed low enough they will become unprofitable for individuals, corporations and banks with surplus funds that many of them will be persuaded to invest more of their funds in bonds which afford higher yields. It is pointed out that a strong bond market has frequently been an important influence in overcoming economic depression.

Gold Stocks Seen Handicap.

The large stocks of gold in the federal reserve system have been regarded by bankers as a handicap on international business for some time, and they hope the present rate of the New York bank may stimulate the flow of gold to other countries. Gold imports during the first three months of 1931 were at a rate of about $450,000,000 a year.

The discount rate of the Bank of England is 3 per cent and that of the Bank of France 2 per cent. Surplus funds naturally gravitate to the money market, where they command the highest interest return, provided the market appears to afford satisfactory safeguards. A flow of funds to London, if it reached substantial proportions, would probably result in shipment of gold. Views of bankers on the desirability of this are far from unanimous, however. The gold statement of the federal reserve bank of New York for the week ended May 6 showed no exports and imports of $3,160,000 from France, $983,000 from Mexico, and $220,000 chiefly from Latin-American countries.

Foreign bankers, particularly London bankers, have repeatedly pointed out that piling up of about 60 per cent of the world's monetary gold stocks in the United States and France is resulting in maldistribution which has hampered economic recovery.

Ramil Norman's Visit to U. S.

Some bankers were inclined to comment on the further reductions in federal reserve rediscount rates so soon after the visit to this country of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England. Federal reserve officials, however, have explained that Mr. Norman's visit was purely for an exchange of views, and that positively no agreements were negotiated.

Stock Exchange Tightens Fixed Trust Regulations

New York, May 7.—(AP)—The New York Stock exchange today announced the inauguration of stringent regulations under which member firms may distribute the securities of so-called fixed investment trusts.

This action has been taken to protect the small investors, and is regarded as one of the most revolutionary steps taken by the exchange in recent years. The fixed trust vogue among security distributors, as a means of serving the small investor, has spread rapidly during the last year. Roughly $1,000,000,000 worth of these securities have been distributed, mostly in 1930 and 1931.

President Richard Whitney of the Stock exchange was "considering what action it should take to draw the attention of the public to the possible dangers connected with fixed investment trusts."

Explains Position.

In announcing its requirements for trusts with which its members may be associated, as security distributors or otherwise, the exchange explains that it "is not prepared to express any opinion regarding the soundness of the principles underlying the formation of investment trusts of the fixed or restricted management type." It proposes, however, that its members shall be associated only with trusts the structures of which "do not contain provisions which in themselves appear to operate to the detriment of those who invest in their securities," and "the information afforded the public in connection therewith is not such as to be misleading or to conceal pertinent facts."

The exchange explains that it is dealing only with determinable facts, and that it would be easy, so far as the investor is concerned, to over emphasize such facts. It explains that the nature of the underlying securities, or other provisions may be easily the most important factors in determining the suitability of a certain trust for a certain investor.

The determination by the exchange that any particular trust is not objectionable, it explains, "should in no event be construed as an expression of opinion in regard to the intrinsic value of such trust or its desirability as an investment."

Must Detail Application.

Trusts desiring to have their securities sold through any stock exchange house must henceforth make a detailed application to the Stock exchange for approval. Furthermore, the exchange will inspect all advertising or sales circulars used by approved trusts. The regulations will shortly effect trusts already affiliated with Stock exchange firms. Firms having such affiliations are given until May 31 to provide the exchange full information regarding them.

The exchange regulations deal emphatically with aspects which Mr. Whitney in his Philadelphia address pointed out as liable to abuse, particularly with the making public in clear form of all facts of charges made to the investor, in addition to the cost of the underlying securities in the trust, and with claims made in connection with the past performances of the trust or its underlying securities.

The action of the exchange follows by a few weeks its drastic tightening up of its listing provisions for shares of the general management type of trust. Owing to its peculiar setup, the fixed trust is not regarded as suitable for listing by the exchange.

Cite Trust Setup.

A fixed trust differs from the general management type in that its underlying securities are restricted to certain specified stocks or bonds. A typical fixed trust would be set up roughly as follows:

A group of investment houses would purchase 10 shares each of, say, 20 issues of stocks regarded by them as having particular merit. These stocks would be placed in trust with a trust company, and perhaps 10,000 certificates issued against them, each certificate carrying ownership of 1-10,000th of the group of stocks held in trust. These certificates would be low in price, and enable the small investor to obtain an equity in a diversified group of stocks which would be too expensive for him to acquire in full. Various regulations are made for the substitution of underlying stocks held in trust, should they, in the opinion of the trusts managers, become undesirable as investments.

In contrast, an unrestricted general management trust permits its management broad powers to buy and sell securities as it sees fit. Some $4,000,000,000 worth of general management type trusts securities have been sold to the general public, but since the bear market in stocks, the trend has been decidedly toward the fixed, or restricted type.

BROKERS' LOANS DROP

Another shrinkage in the amount of credit used in speculation and a slight increase in the demand for credit for commercial purposes were revealed in the weekly reports of the federal reserve board.

Brokers' loans declined $31,000,000 in the last week, reaching a new low mark at $1,699,000,000 since compilation of the data was begun in 1926. The current total compares with $4,074,000,000 a year ago, or a decline of $2,375,000,000. While the New York banks increased their own loans by $25,000,000, the interior banks and non-banking lenders withdrew $30,000,000 and $26,000,000 respectively.

Borrowings Decline.

The statement of the federal reserve system showed a decline of $4,949,000 in member bank borrowings, which now total $150,202,000. However, the reserve banks bought an additional $24,104,000 of bankers' acceptances. Reserves declined $7,087,000 and the ratio of reserves to liabilities eased to 83.4 per cent, compared with 84 per cent last week.

In the New York district member bank borrowings declined $2,088,000 to $28,472,000. Bankers' acceptances increased $11,208,000, while government securities declined $22,543,000. Reserves declined $933,000, but the reserve ratio rose to 87.5 per cent, compared with 86.8 per cent a week ago. In the Chicago district member bank borrowings declined $167,000 to $13,500,000, but bankers' acceptances expanded $3,339,000. Reserves declined $2,933,000 and the reserve ratio sagged to 86.1 per cent, compared with 86.7 per cent last week.

FOUR MONTHS' MUNICIPAL BOND ISSUES SET A RECORD

SAYS OTHER MERGERS WOULD BE OF MORE BENEFIT TO ALTON RY.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—Merger of the Chicago and Alton railroad with any one of several other systems would be "much more beneficial to the Alton than union with the Baltimore and Ohio," W. A. Van Hook, Chicago valuation engineer, testified today in the hearing before the interstate commerce commission on the application of the Alton Railway company and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to take over the line.

Van Hook previously had testified in the hearing, conducted by Finance Director Sweet of the commission, that the Chicago and Alton was worth from $111,295,189 to $115,874,056 at the end of 1930. Witnesses for the Baltimore and Ohio at sessions two weeks ago testified the line, in bankruptcy for nine years, was worth no more than $75,000,000.

Today's hearing was given over to witnesses for the stockholders' protective committee, represented by former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri. Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, Va., headed the legal staff of the Baltimore and Ohio. The road was sold to the Baltimore and Ohio in a foreclosure sale last December for $223,000,000 plus approximately $52,000,000 of debts. The buyers claimed the stockholders had no equity in the system while the stockholders alleged they had not been given due consideration in the courts and that they had an equity of upwards of $60,000,000.

Van Hook, representing a Chicago firm of engineers, testified his study of the system and various possible mergers had shown that traffic expenses could be cut $150,000 without a merger and that in the event a merger with the New York Central railroad could be arranged there could be effected a saving of $495,000 a year. Other possible mergers, he said, would make possible the following savings: With the Pennsylvania, $488,900; Van Sweringen lines, $453,900; Baltimore and Ohio, $252,800; Missouri Pacific system, $172,000, and the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, $170,000.

Seubert Advises Motorists to Combat Gasoline Taxes

BY O. A. MATHER.

The charge that politicians and legislators in many states have pounced on gasoline taxes in order to indulge in extravagances not connected with highway building is made by Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, in his annual report, made public yesterday. He called on motorists, the oil companies and their stockholders to combat such levies.

EDWARD P. SEUBERT.

"The total gasoline tax collections for the United States in 1930 reached the staggering total of $522,110,961," Mr. Seubert says. "While there may be justification for a moderate tax on gasoline for road building purposes, taxing bodies apparently have singled it out as the medium through which they may indulge in new extravagances for an increasing variety of purposes.

Must Check Extravagances.

"The time has arrived when the industry, its stockholders and patrons should unite to check the increase of the tax burden on petroleum and its products. Already it bears many times more than its fair share of the load. High gasoline tax rates will eventually seriously affect consumption. Foreign, federal, state, and local taxes paid by our company and its subsidiaries in 1930 reached a total of $13,723,549. In addition to this sum the company paid gasoline tax aggregating $47,651,658. The total amount turned over to taxing agencies exceeded the total net earnings."

Mr. Seubert also recites the difficulties of the oil industry last year and measures taken and others needed to stabilize the industry.

"Coöperation in following the guidance of the federal oil conservation board as to curtailment of production and manufacturing involved reducing exploration, producing and refining," he says. "This action contributed materially toward the good progress made by the industry in its striving for a better balance between supply and demand. But is was demonstrated that reduction of output and stocks is not alone sufficient to preserve sound conditions in the industry so long as any considerable supply of crude or finished products remains without a ready market.

Sell at Distress Prices.

"Under pressure of the depression and of competition, many producers and refiners resorted to selling at distress prices. Doubtful conditions have carried over into 1931. The bringing in of much new production, especially in east Texas, is a very disturbing factor, threatening to give cause to additional distress selling. Efforts to bring about a suitable balance between supply and demand must be supplemented by adherence on the part of all producers, refiners and marketers to the policy of conducting their business on a sound business basis."

The report for the first time consolidated Standard Oil of Indiana and all its subsidiary and affiliate companies. Total assets at the end of 1930 were $801,184,070. Current assets were $265,834,246, including more than $88,000,000 in cash and marketable securities, while current liabilities were $49,338,886. Net earnings for 1930 were $46,371,437 after an inventory writedown of $17,026,963. The profit was equivalent to $2.73 a share on 16,596,595 capital shares outstanding at the end of the year.

Eggs and Gasoline Sell Around Dime in Lincoln

Lincoln, Neb., May 7.—(AP)—Eggs were selling at 10 cents a dozen and gasoline at 10.9 cents a gallon, tax included, in Lincoln today. Poultry house men who quoted the dime a dozen price to farmers said it was the lowest they could remember in thirty years. The retail price is 13 cents a dozen and up.

Predict 75,000 Ton Drop in U. S. Steel Backlog

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 7.—A decrease of between 75,000 and 100,000 tons in unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, as of April 30, will be reported Saturday noon in the company's monthly statement, it was estimated today. Although operations were steadily curtailed last month to below 50 per cent, new business was not sufficient to offset deliveries, it was said.

Treasury Offering Is Heavily Oversubscribed

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—The $50,000,000 issue of treasury bills to be dated May 11 today was heavily oversubscribed. Secretary Mellon announced that the total amount applied for was $291,690,000, but that the amount accepted was $50,000,000. The average price of the bills to be issued is 99.701, while the average rate on a bank discount basis is about 1.18 per cent.

WELCH GRAPE JUICE DECLARES EXTRA DIVIDEND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 7.—An extra dividend of 25 cents a share was announced today by directors of the Welch Grape Juice company, in addition to the regular quarterly of the same amount.

Directors of Crum and Forster Insurance voted an extra dividend of 25 cents a share and the regular quarterly of the same amount on the class A and B common stocks.

J. J. Warren, president of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting company of Canada, Ltd., indicated that the semi-annual bonus this year will consist of 5 per cent in stock instead of the usual extra of $5 in cash. The company is controlled by the Canadian Pacific company.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 7.—There wasn't much nourishment for the boys in today's dealings on the stock exchange. Bull and bear lumbered about among the various market departments without much credit to either, although the range in weak issues seemed to extend a bit further than did that in stocks trying to look upward. Selling was most effective in such issues as Columbia Gas, Eastman Kodak, Western Union, Allied Chemical, and Canadian Pacific, while Woolworth, Crucible Steel, Norfolk and Western and a half dozen or so others were shining lights for the bull forces.

Both United States Steel and American Can, recognized leaders of the list, were depressed to new lows by selling which reached its peak in the last hour of trading. Steel hit 109¾ and Can 104⅞, both recovering a point or so before the final gong rang.

News of any market significance was a scarce commodity, as it has been for the last week or more. Traders were looking for the reduction in the rediscount rate ordered at the meeting of the federal reserve bank directors here later in the afternoon, following the cuts at Philadelphia and Boston, and brokers said that a deal of quiet buying was going on in selective quarters of the list in anticipation of a rally on the strength of such anticipated action.

Talk of Recovery.

Talk of the recovery has been growing for some days now, the letters of some of the most solid brokerage houses of the street venturing predictions of a possible repetition of the January-February rebound, but if the rank and file are sharing very extensively in the conviction they certainly are not manifesting it in any wild scramble to buy stocks. The turnover today, for example, was only 1,700,000 shares as compared with yesterday's total of 1,500,000 and the final tables showed more minus than plus signs by a good margin.

However, it must be admitted that

WANTED—Bond Salesmen
But Not to Sell Bonds

A securities corporation sponsored by a group of well-known men, some of whom have had long experience in the investment business, has developed a new and entirely different investment plan with a supplemental feature that differentiates it from anything yet offered and promises nation-wide acceptance. A good man, as representative in Chicago, can make commissions far more than the average income.

If you are well educated, of good appearance, with a knowledge of the stock or bond business, or if you have a desire to enter the securities business, make application by letter, giving complete history of your selling experience. Your credentials will be held confidential until after interview.

EQUAL THE RIGHT SECURITIES

• It is natural at a time like this that many investors are uncertain as to the future of the securities they hold. Then there are others who feel that their securities do not fit their investment needs as they see them.

• Under these circumstances, it is desirable to review investment accounts in the light of current conditions. Such a review need not involve any changes in securities held. If the investments in the account fit the requirements, there is nothing to be gained from disturbing them. If the market price of some of them is a matter of concern, an effort can be made to determine whether the price reflects impairment in quality or just passing influences.

Right now, there are great irregularities in the market estimate of securities. Price is less exact as an index to intrinsic values than it is under more normal conditions. Several securities at the same price may have radically different prospects.

• This is, therefore, a particularly good time to consider your investments with an open mind. After all, there is no real difference between the present value of your holdings and an equivalent amount of cash. Starting with that point of view and having in mind your particular requirements, let x equal the securities you ought to have. We shall be glad to assist you in determining whether you have them now.

TELLS OF PLAN FOR A FEDERAL MORTGAGE BANK

BY AL CHASE.

Harry S. Kissell, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in a speech delivered yesterday before the Suburban Real Estate Board council at Evanston, announced that plans were under way for the formation of a national mortgage rediscounting bank, somewhat similar to the federal reserve banking system. He stated that the plan has been briefly submitted to Secretary of Commerce Lamont, who approved so thoroughly of the project that he urged it be worked out comprehensively.

HARRY S. KISSELL. (Kaufmann & Fabry Photo.)

This new plan of discounting real estate paper will be taken under consideration immediately following the annual realty convention at Baltimore the latter part of May. It is expected that investment bankers will work through the proposed federal mortgage bank.

Calls Realty a Panic Bulwark.

President Kissell had this to say about the present depression: "The time has come when the realtors of this country should stop the many unfair and untrue things which are being said of their commodity, and should show to the country and the investors that if real estate had taken the same precipitous drop which other commodities took during the last depression that this country would have been a financial shambles today. The strength of real estate has been the great stabilizing factor in the last two years."

Mr. Kissell spoke at the noon luncheon at the Georgian hotel, at which Mrs. W. H. Wright presided. Dean Ralph E. Heilman of the school of commerce, Northwestern university, at the afternoon session declared the one thing needed most at present was the formation of a refinancing mortgage plan for small investors. Other speakers were George F. Nixon, president of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, and Dr. Richard T. Ely.

New Store for State Street.

Leases were signed yesterday whereby State street is to have a brand new national chain men's clothing store. The new firm, known as Jarvis Jackson & Co., Inc., will occupy the second, third and fourth floors and twenty-eight feet on the first floor of the building at the northwest corner of State and Jackson. This is space formerly occupied by Foreman & Clark. The new organization has leased this space for ten years from the Hilton Co., Inc., which controls it through a ninety-nine year lease.

Jarvis Jackson & Co. will have its headquarters in Chicago, and the local store will be the first of a contemplated chain of similar establishments throughout the country, according to Frank J. Murray, who is the principal owner. Mr. Murray, by the way, is secretary and treasurer of the Hilton Co., Inc., but states that his interest in the new firm is a personal venture and has no connection with the Hilton concern.

Owned by Group.

Mr. Murray states that Jarvis Jackson & Co. is composed of a group of wealthy manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of men's clothing. The names of these men will be disclosed later. The new concern will sell men's clothing exclusively and all at one price.

The new firm's quarters are to be remodeled from plans by Teich & Sullivan. The opening is scheduled for Friday, May 15.

Illinois Central Requests Permission to Issue Notes

Washington, D. C., May 7.—(AP)—The Illinois Central railroad today asked the interstate commerce commission for permission to issue $20,000,000 of short term notes for construction and maintenance purposes. The notes would be issued June 1 and would be due either June 1 or Dec. 1, 1933, and bear 4½ per cent interest.

HOGS—Bulk of sales yesterday, $6.40@7.20; top, $7.20; one month ago.....7.00@7.90; one year ago.....9.85@10.30.
CATTLE—Bulk, $7.45; average, $6.80; top, $9.50; one month ago.....6.75@7.50; one year ago.....7.50@8.50.
SHEEP—Bulk of sales yesterday.....$4.00@5.75; one month ago.....5.50@9.00; one year ago.....10.25@12.50.

Cattle held about steady on yesterday's session, while hogs and lambs were subjected to sharp price cuts in spite of the fact that supplies of all classes of stock were small for Thursday. Combined receipts at Chicago at 39,000 compared with 50,879 last Thursday and with 42,830 a year ago. The hog supply at 18,000 was second smallest for Thursday since Jan. 1. Sheep receipts at 13,000 equaled the smallest for Thursday since Feb. 5.

All of Wednesday's gains have been erased and prevailing quotations are fully 15@25c under the closing level of last week's market. Buying was more mixed than usual. City butchers and some small packers that specialize in fresh pork were willing buyers at the reduction, due to a slightly lighter market for fresh pork loins. Most local packers held back for more bullish and withdrew with small purchases in the day.

Today's Hogs Bid $7.15.

Light hogs averaging 170@210 lbs for today's delivery were bid $7.15 on the "to arrive" market yesterday, while mediums averaging 210@260 lbs carried bids of $6.90. On the future market May light were bid $7.25 for the first half of the month and $7.00 for the last half. Some light were offered at $8.10 and bid $7.85, while September light were offered at $8.00. May mediums were offered at $7.75. Mediums for September were offered at 8.10 and bid $7.85, while September heavy grades were offered at $7.95.

Although cattle prices held about in line with the recent decline, movement of stock at prevailing quotations was slow. Buyers are indifferent except when salesmen seem willing to take off a little to make a sale. Prices at recent sessions have been lowest since 1922, with today's sales 25@50c under the close of last week's market.

No cattle of outstanding quality were available yesterday. The best load lot on sale stopped at $8.25, and a few head brought $8.50, while the bulk changed hands at $6.75@7.50. Yearling grades of steers ranged downward to $6.75. Baby beef heifers averaging 750 lbs were sold at $8.00. Calves were strong to higher.

One of the sharpest declines in recent weeks was recorded yesterday when buyers balked at paying Wednesday's advance for top wooled stock. Sellers obtained bulk of offerings around $8.50, but shippers paid up to $8.65 and city butchers took a load at $8.85. Most sales showed 50c decline. Burn lambs shared in the break, sellers taking most good kinds at $7.50@8.00, while top to city butchers was $8.75. Aged sheep and yearlings were scarce and steady.

Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Omits Quarterly Dividend

The Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company has omitted the quarterly stock dividends on the class A common and class B stocks. Previously, the company had paid stock dividends at the rate of 2½ per cent quarterly on the class A shares, and in the previous quarter, paid 1-200th of a common share on the class B stock. No cash dividends were paid.

COTTON RANGE NARROW

Cotton markets had a narrow range yesterday and finished with prices in Chicago unchanged to 5 points net higher, while other markets were 10@15 points higher. Spots were quoted in New York 9.85c, New Orleans, Galveston 9.75c, and Houston 9.70c. Futures in Liverpool, with the close 1@2 points higher and sales of 5,000 bales of spot cotton, failed to stimulate more than a fairly sustained buying of futures in American markets, despite the weekly government crop report being construed as favorable. Predictions of clearing weather, however, led to selling in the late trading, with some cables more favorable and indicating a curtailing of cotton by shorts. Prices:

SCATTERED RAIN IN CANADA SENDS WHEAT LOWER

Corn Trading Is Erratic; Prices Recede.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Scattered rain and showers in Alberta and Saskatchewan, with prospects that the usual spring period of precipitation was developing in the Canadian provinces, took the bull edge off the wheat market yesterday and with scattered selling by longs and a lack of aggressive support prices dropped 1⅛@1¼c from Wednesday's finish and closed within a fraction of the bottom with net losses of 1¼@1¼c. July finished at 61⅛@62c; September, 61¾@61¾c, and December, 65⅛@65¼c. Old May advanced ⅝c to a high of 82⅝c early, but reacted and closed ¼c higher at 82⅜c.

No precipitation was reported in the American northwest, but the forecast indicated showers and more than offset reports from that section of lack of subsoil reserve. Winnipeg wheat developed pronounced weakness on local and commission house selling and closed 1⅝@2¼c lower, the latter on October. July finished at 61⅜c. Houses with foreign and export connections were buyers there on the break. According to reports to the Searle Grain company of Winnipeg for the week ending May 4 there had been no rain at the average station in Alberta in 26 days; Saskatchewan, 50 days, and Manitoba, 41 days.

Wheat Market Overbought.

Part of the decline in the Chicago wheat pit was regarded as due to selling of that grain against purchases of corn to undo spreads. There was some buying at times against bids, but the sellers of the latter were forced to protect themselves later and added to the weight put on the market. Technically the wheat market was regarded as in somewhat of an overbought condition, and the removal of the bullish influence of dry weather by the development of timely rains resulted in considerable change in sentiment, especially as crop comments from the winter wheat belt generally remain very favorable.

The trade ignored an official French estimate cabled to J. S. Bache & Co. giving the wheat condition as 66 against 73 a year ago, while the acreage was placed at 12,490,000 acres, or 500,000 acres less than last year. Liverpool was ⅛@⅛d lower on the more favorable weather reports from the North American spring wheat area. Buenos Aires was off over 1c late in the day, with weakness in the exchange rate a factor.

Trade in Hard Winter.

Around 500,000 bu Canadian wheat were reported as having been sold for export in all positions, and a little business was done in hard winter. Clearances of the latter from the various ports were reported at 480,000 bu, the largest in some time.

Corn fluctuated in a most erratic manner, breaking early only to rally around 1½c from the early low to a new high on the present movement, and then weaken toward the last in sympathy with wheat and on selling by some of the early buyers and the finish was ⅝@⅞c lower on the old crop months, while the December was 1⅛c lower. May closed at 57⅝@57¾c; July, 59⅛@59¼c; September, 58¼@58⅝c, and December, 51¼@51⅜c. Buying of corn against sales of wheat had some effect, and there was also free covering by shorts at times.

Cash Corn Demand Off.

Shipping demand for cash corn fell off very sharply, with sales of only 25,000 bu reported for the day. Country offerings were again small, with purchases of 5,000 bu made to arrive. Northwestern interests reported a good demand and said they expected it to continue.

There was no material pressure on oats and the finish was ⅛@¼c lower, with May, 27⅜c; July, 28@28⅛c; September, 28⅛@28⅜c, and December, 30⅛c. A house with southwestern connections was a fair buyer, with locals the best sellers. Shipping demand was slow.

Rye acted a little tight and closed ½c higher, while the deferred futures were ⅝@1¼c lower. May finished at 35⅛c; July, 37c, and September, 37⅝c. Cash interests were fair buyers of July at Minneapolis. Some export business was put through in Canadian rye.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A government crop report on winter wheat and rye will be given to the trade at 3 p. m. Chicago time. Private reports issued May 1 covered a range on winter wheat from 632,000,000 bu to 690,000,000 bu and an average of 658,000,000 bu, with a condition 90.2, against 76.7 least year. A government report on April 1 made the condition 88.8, or the same as the private reports and estimated the crop at 644,000,000 bu, or 40,000,000 bu more than last year's harvest. Expectations are that the government will show around 650,000,00 to 660,000,000 bu.

There is a disposition on the part of wheat traders to look for a bearish showing by the government to be issued late this afternoon. Most traders believe the moisture situation is to be the leading factor in the wheat market from now on. The best posted people in the northwest apparently are skeptical about there being sufficient moisture to produce a large crop of spring wheat on both sides of the international line. Prices are at a level where there is more disposition to buy on all breaks and take profits on sharp bulges, pending definite information as to the moisture situation, both in the American and Canadian northwest.

LARD FIRM

Lack of selling pressure, with a little scattered buying, held lard futures steady to firm yesterday, with the close 7½c higher on May, unchanged for July, and 2½c higher on September. At the same time bellies, which have been neglected, came in for more attention, and, with offerings light, May closed 25c higher, with July 22½c higher. Cash trade in bellies was dull and prices ¼c higher, while business in cash lard was fair, mainly at outside points. Liverpool lard was unchanged to 3d higher, the latter for September.
